TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 20.

VOTE FOR DR SULLIVAN

THEIR ONLY HOLD.

The Grits have been fighting a battle against overwhelming odds in their struggle against the National Policy. In vain they declare that we have a bad Government, when we see the country flourishing in spite of the vain they preach the destructive effects of a a fair trade tariff, while commerce continues to flourish; in vain they tell the manufacturer that he is ruined by the tariff, when the economic under which he enjoys steadier employment and receives better wages than ever before. Every argument meets with terrific force against those who see them, and there is only one chance left—the only hope is to excite the wrath of the populace by wildly declaiming against the tariff, and ringing the changes upon such terms as "ring preserve," "burdensome," etc. This course has been pursued to the fullest extent by our Grit friends, and it may be of advantage to examine the force of the only argument which has any chance of turning a vote.

"Vote against the coal tax" is the cry reiterated from one end of the country to the other in the stentorian tones of Grit declamation. Now, investigation has shown that in order to relieve the control of the market the coal owners have reduced the price of the article in accordance with the degree of competition into which they are brought with Canadian coal, and that while the competition has been enormously increased by the operation of the tariff. In 1879, prior to the 15th March the day on which the National Policy was introduced, Ontario dealers paid $4 27 per ton for their supplies, while Philadelphia dealers obtained it for $2 89. After that date, however, the latter advanced, and in 1881 Ontario dealers obtained their coal for $4 34 while their Philadelphia composers were obliged to pay $4 92, or 58 cents more. This shows conclusively that the American coal owners have been loud to reduce the price of their coal sold in Canada, under pressure of the tariff.

But, because that the reverse is the case, conceds to our adversaries that we pay the entire amount of the duty imposed upon coal. What then? Is the money thrown into the sea? By no means; it is placed in the treasury of the Dominion to the credit of the Finance Minister, and forms part of his surplus. What is the use of a surplus? Does it not represent money unjustly taken from the pockets of the people? By no means; it is made use of to reduce the burdens of the people by removing taxes, such as those on stamps, tea and coffee, and newspapers; it is used for the purpose of paying the indemnity to the Syndicate, so that the strain of that payment will not be felt, and next year it will be made use of for the purpose of reducing the interest on the public debt of $400,000 per annum, a sum equivalent to the whole amount of the coal tax. Surely this cannot be said to represent a waste!

Now, turn we to the Gentles of Grittam, and what do we find? We find that the iron steel rail speculation Mr Mackenzie lost $2,000,000 of the public money, that the loan and interest on the Lake Superior section of the C.P.R. and on the Welland Canal, through Grit blundering, amounted to over $2,000,000, that $300,000 were thrown away on the Fort Francis and Nipissing Intisiqua job, that $41,000 were thrown away upon the Georgian Bay branch railway, that favouritism to "friend Moore and others cost $1,000,000, that $28,000 were spent unwisely in the Pacific telegraph, and that Sir Richard Cartwright's prodigious blundering in the loans of 1874 and 1876 caused the sacrifice of $6,651,218

Gentlemen in the items we have enumerated the Grits wasted $11,157,089 and this prodigal sum was destroyed, wasted, squandered, thrown into the sea.

Over eleven millions of dollars! Why, the money is sufficient to pay the coal tax for the whole country for nine years and a half. It is almost half the money indemnity to the C.P.R. At four per cent per annum it would have placed a burden of $447,000 in taxes every year. Abolish our tax on coal—coal might as well be made to contribute to the revenue as any other article—is handed over to the Government, is made use of to reduce our debt and meet our public engagements, is turned to public advantage; but a greater amount was absolutely wasted by Grit jobbery and incapacity.

Gentlemen, what think you of the picture? It is for you to decide this day whether we shall be ruled by unprincipled demagogues, or by able and patriotic counsellors, who adopt wise measures for Canadian development. If you prefer the latter, your ballot will be cast for Michael Sullivan.

Vote for Sullivan and work for full time.

Accomodated.

To the editor of the DAILY NEWS.

DEAR SIR,—I see Mr Graham wants to know who he canvassed. He, in company with Mr Gunn, Mr Delaney, Mr Carruthers and another gentleman, visited the residence of Mr Adam McBratney, Bay street, and before four o'clock in the afternoon too. He has canvassed two or three ladies that I know, with a view to getting their husbands votes.—Yours etc.,

FAIR PLAY.

A DYING KICK.

The thoroughly unscrupulous character of the Grit organ here is well illustrated by the disreputable attempt in last night's issue to stir up religious feeling, in the hope of thus aiding its candidate when everything else had failed. The hypocritical cant with which it assailed the personnel and venomous spleen which it displayed to disguise the dastardly object in view, or hide it from the most careless reader. But the attempt will recoil with vengeance upon the heads of those who made it. Nothing can hurt men in the Reform ranks more most regard it with horror and disgust, and we can see little before that Mr Graham's own associates will look upon assistance like such tactics as that he is responsible for the low morality that forms the greater part of Whig literature. The Whig only represents the dregs of the party, it is despised by all men of fair and honourable minds. As we have already said, the dirty brick will not work, the day is gone by when dissection can be sown among our citizens, when they can be lured into enemies by any shan-faced politician who has a grievance in his hatred for his own ends. The Whigs articles are based upon a series of unqualified falsehoods, invented for the purpose, but the trick will not work. A liberal-conservative will not be mater our people of every shade of religious conviction. They are labouring harmoniously together, as friends and fellow citizens should, the beneficent influences of peace and goodwill happily prevail, a public feeling is abroad which will put to confusion the contemptible instigators of a reckless period, and which will locate the great questions of national importance irrespective of other considerations

CAMPAIGN NOTES

Friend Cherry had his illuminations on Saturday night, we intend having ours to night.

Is the doctor coming from California this time to attend to the cabmen." If not, who is to do it?

Every man who has more than ten per cent interest in the welfare of canada will vote to day against the hard-money candidate, Alex. Gunn.

The inheritant spirit, which discharges a man because he intends working for a political opponent, is the spirit of the first party

Why did not Mr Gunn start factories during the campaign that Mr Gunn would have from 30 to 100 of a majority last night instead of 5 as he was, that he didn't give Dr. Sullivan a majority.

Were the members of the coal oil ring, who raised the price of coal oil from 15 to 70 cents some years ago, friends of the poor man?

A crowded and enthusiastic meeting was held in the Conservative Committee rooms last night. The crowd was so great that the windows were pressed out and broken.

Total Annihilation

Oh, he was a Bowery book black bold,
And his razors were numbered nine,
Rough and ragged and sad he was,
He constantly aimed to shine

As proud as a king on his box he sat,
Watching with hawk-like eye,
While the happy rich and looked wistfully on,
And "three an a bite!" they cried

But the best black shaked a lordly smile;
He was free from want and care,
When the boys they sadly walked away,
He was the shaker at his side.

"Bright are the eyes, he whispered low,
That best black sailed once more,
And a handsome dimple graces his cheek—
There ain't gals to be seen."

What the Grits Said in 1878

That the Conservatives will not carry the National Policy

That they have carried it out

That if carried out it would not give remunerative employment

That it has employed tens of thousands

That it would not raise the rate of wages

Answer: It has raised the rate of wages fully 25 per cent

That it would not produce sufficient revenue

Answer: It has produced a large surplus, so large that important duties are being removed.

That it would increase the price of manufactured goods

Answer Manufactured goodsare cheaper at this day they were before

That it would lessen our trade with the Mother Country

Answer: It has largely increased our trade with the Mother Country.

That it would ruin our credit

Answer—Our credit never stood so high as it does to-day, and has never stood so low as when the Grits were in office.

Panic in Moscow.

St. Petersburg, June 19 — Count Tolstoi's return to office has created a perfect panic in Moscow and has led to trouble in Tambov, the government of these districts being in insurrection. General Ignatieff, who has awarded the peasants in the village of the Kazan government, took possession of the land in the neighbourhood and portioned it among themselves. The landlords appealed for protection, hoping to displace Count Tolstoi's suspension of La Moskva, an import newspaper, is evidently intended to frighten the larger journals which are panic stricken.

Sullivan and prosperity; Gunn and hard times

Railroad Matters

Albany, June 19 —The Addison and Northern Pennsylvania Railroad Company filed their articles in Albany to-day. From the Erie Railroad at Addison twelve miles to Coudersport in the line between New York and Pennsylvania on the Allegheny River. Stockholders county Capital, $600,000. The directors include Thos. A. Fish, Roscoe Conkling and J. H. Shenk.

Protection of Immigrants

Washington, June 20 — In the Senate a bill regulating the carriage of passengers was passed. The object of the bill is to protect emigrants shipped from foreign ports, from promiscuous intermingling without regard to sex and enforce sanitary regulations.

A New Bureau.

Washington, June 19 — The Bill establishing a bureau of animal industry to prevent the importation of infected cattle and infectious diseases among domestic animals has also been passed.

Prejudice Kills

Every year our daughter suffered on a bed of misery under the care of several of the best (and some of the worst) physicians, who gave her disease various names but no relief, and now she is restored to us in good health by a simple remedy, Hop Bitters, that we had pushed at her very last, before using it. We earnestly hope and pray that no one else will let their sick suffer as we did, on account of prejudice against a medicine as Hop Bitters. The Parents

AQUATIC

Wallace Ross at Work—The Coming Regatta.

Ross has begun his regular training at Wamping for his race with Hanlan. On Saturday afternoon a large number of people assembled at the foot of Post Office street when the celebrated oar for the first spin on the surging Red River. He went up the river and returned covering about five miles. The morning Ross and his trainer left their quarters and proceeded to the musical pavilion, Post Office, where their two shells remained till the afternoon. Ross stripped himself and put on his practice clothing, after which the boat was put in the water, and Ross started up the river. A pretty stiff breeze was blowing down the river and the water was rough in places, the current being rendered by the wind much swifter than when in its normal state. He struck out at a lively rate up the river, pulling the boat along nearly against the strong current, and rowed nearly seven miles, when he turned, with the exception of a large crowd of people who thronged the floats and filled the decks of the steamer Hamilton, followed alongside. Quite a number of ladies, anxious to see the champion and champion, were on hand to see him start, several coming in carriages. Ross, on returning, was seen in the morning. Kennedy stopped and got aboard the steamer and he rowed up to the float. At a word he shot down the stream again to the head of the island, where he was met by Kennedy, who ordered him to turn around. Kennedy was evidently studying the current, especially on the Manitoba side, and, after a few words of instruction to Ross, he started down the river, Ross following him on the run. Arrived at the head of the island, drifted slowly down. Winnipeg, the steamer that will tow the Regatta committee the afternoon it was ordered that the following regatta be held by Hanlan —"Are you coming within the date agreed upon? Answer must be positive—yes or no. Wire us at once."
