FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 28

Kent York Reformers intend at an early day giving a banquet to Mr Mackenzie their successful candidate. The old-time reformers in Kent would like nothing on the whole to the best purpose for himself and his country, and he has not been too well used by his followers. Consequently it is right of the East Yorkers to do what they can to soothe the feelings of the ex-Premier and banish from his mind as much as possible the memory of the night put on him in disposing him to make room for Mr Blake.

Mr Davin shows in a recent paper that the idea of a great transcontinental route through British American soil did not originate with the promoters of the C. P. R. "It is not possible" he says, "that a cultivated man to think of the day when the traveller shall take his ticket in Halifax to be carried across the Dominion to Victoria and thence to Hong Kong, without recalling Sebastian Cabot in 1512 in the palace of Ferdinand plan ning under the monarch's eye an exploration of the Northwest passage; to Jean Between that time and 1880 there were a number of schemes proposed for carrying the project into operation, but for various reasons none of them succeeded.

The coroner's jury in the Young shooting case in Toronto did well to return a verdict of "wilful murder against Absolom Albert, the guilty party. Albert was charged with the duty of putting several young boys off a farm belonging to a gentleman in Parkville. The boys were retreating as fast as they could, when the servant of the law overtook them and seizing the eldest, a lad of seventeen, threatened to shoot him unless he surrendered. The resister, a well-grown young, went off during his performance and penetrated the brain of the victim. There are circumstances under which such an accident might be deemed excusable, but the present is scarcely within the category. There was no occasion whatever for the flourishing of the fatal weapon, and if a man undertakes to deal with boys cheeking in a small matter as if they were dogs, dread criminals he must bear the responsibility of the result.

Harvest time is approaching and the prospects are that we will have an overflowing harvest in Canada. As a contemporary remarks, while we talk of our harvest time, there is always a harvest in some part of the world. In Australia, New Zealand, Chili and other parts of the southern hemisphere, what we call the winter months of December and January is harvest time. In India it begins about the end of February, is completed in April or in March. In Mexico, Persia and Syria, it takes place in April. May finds people harvesting in Asia Minor, Algeria, Morocco and parts of China and Japan, while climates after these countries come California, Spain, Portugal, Italy Greece and Southern France. In July they harvest in France, Austria, Hungary, Poland, Russia and the middle United States and Canada and the Northern States come early in August, with England, Germany, Denmark, Belgium and Holland. Then in September come Scotland, Northern Russia, Sweden, and we suppose the Northern part of America.

THE BRITISH ARMY.

As the Egyptian trouble is growing in importance daily and assuming a serious aspect in that quarter of the globe, Englishmen, the strength and organization of the British army becomes a matter of interest and intelligent comment. The best published on the first page in the annual return issued December. According to this the average strength of the regular forces during the year 1880 was 188,086 — 91 those 7,817 were officers, 12,431 sergeants and farriers, 3,473 trumpeters, drummers and buglers, and 163,366 rank and file. On the 1st of January 1880, the number of the rank and file was 167,949, or 3,594 over the establishment on the 1st of January, 1881, it was 165,320, or 397 over the establishment. At the last date the number we had of each arm of the service was as follows: Household cavalry, 1,020; cavalry of the line, 13,592; Royal horse artillery, 4,827; Royal Engineers, 4,033; Royal Artillery, 29,473; Foot Guards, 9,260; Infantry of the line, 104,480. Colonial corps, 1,460. The remainder consisted of the departmental army services and hospital corps.

A general view or synopsis of the returns applies that, prior to the short service system, there was generally a substantial deficiency in the strength of the army, but since its introduction there has been, for the most part, an excess. The average height of soldiers in England and Wales is good. "When the Flag Leaves" the British soldier in the ranks, is a fine straightforward interpretation to place on that act. Then eliminate absolutely that "drinking" and other may be possible but that certainly will not be.

Seated one balmy afternoon on the veranda of Mrs Howe's residence, on Newport Street Wade was heard to remark to a lady friend that he thought a year's rest from all risk stockings should so upset a man's whimsy as to make him want something with a little remote from the post intercourse. It is to that that is in the stockings.

When it was announced to the members of the company that Mr Haverly had sold his interests in the Genuine Colored Georgia Minstrels to the Professor Brothers, an indignant man and brother said to the spruce active Haverly. "Then has!" Well, I declare, I never thought you was done go so soon." The fifteenth amendment Aye Sir! as good as a thing, for any of the British soldiers is starvation. The nation of shop-keepers practices economy by trading upon the national privilege and by rewarding her defenders by sugar plums instead of substantial advantages. A military life is not a rational industrial vocation in which a man may hope to achieve competence by honesty and perseverance. But it is a career in which men are inevitably lured by the glamour of martial fame and the glittering delusion that they will become direct sharers in the glorious story and history. A British officer cannot rise at least on his professional merits, and the recognized principle that this must be supplemented by private resources. His position when the latter are scanty is that of a genteel, and therefore doubly unfortunate pauper. This circumstance of the state of affairs is that payment of results or reward according to merit is unknown. The army is not a business profession, and therefore cannot be dealt with on business principles. England allows remarkable indulgence and tenderness for her failures because they have made financial sacrifices for her sake.

Englishmen with their interest disguised is frequently promoted, and is always decorated. A campaign is always followed by a flush of decorations such as the British nation can scarcely understand. Long service is substituted to reward merit for what should be within their simple duty. This is Mr Forbes opinion of England's military system. But suppose the Queen was troubled for officers of valour and renown of that service that is (most mercenary).

Appointments

Ottawa, July 28 — The Hon. Sir Alexander Campbell has been elected to be accepted a seat in the Cabinet and will return to by his Excellency Lord Lansdowne. The Hon. Joseph Adam Mousseau, Minister of Agriculture, and Mr. Thomas Mousseau's position as secretary.

Queen Victoria is said sometimes gets so many of her foreign titles in a day. She has no doubt got over losing nervous at seeing the telegraph boy at the door.

Dr. Tanner has left Chicago for Saginaw on a diet that the British can't fight on, and which is a great surprise even for him. His fast may get really clever.

Thomas Kearns, of Troy, has discharged Dalrymple, Miller & Co. from jail on 10 days of less. Kearns weighs 178 lbs., is only years of age, and without any record.

Queen Victoria has just given, at Windsor Castle, a ball to the servants of the household, for the first time since the marriage of the Prince of Wales, eleven years ago.

M. Sullivan, school inspector, now at the Queen, has taken home with him a fine specimen of the Indian Wampum belt. Nothing else, we believe, has been found in the Province.

Mrs Langtree has made over to her husband all the property she has ever had, and has also given a bond for $5,000 to secure him against any debts she may contract as an actress.

Archibald, a Fenian who was in the Australian penal settlement, has been pardoned and released. He was sentenced to death for murder and robbery, but the sentence was commuted to imprisonment for life. He was released on condition that he would not return to Australia or Europe, and has gone to Japan.

Constantinople Times — At the outbreak of the late war with Russia the Turkish Government purchased a number of vessels for the purpose of transporting troops. Egypt exchanged the ships that England in exchange for Suez Canal shares. Some of these vessels have been lying idle in the Golden Horn for the last two years, and the Ottoman Government has now decided to dispose of them by auction.

THE EASTERN TROUBLES.

The Bombarument of Abukkir Postponed Heavy Firing The Crops

Alexandria, July 28 — Lord Beresford states that, with the assistance of the Egyptian gunboats he would have forced the passage of the forts commanding the entrance of the harbor of Abukkir, causing the destruction of supporting the fires and landing, but that, having the control of the

HIS DUTY TO STAY.

In a certain church in this city there is an individual of exemplary deportment, who has a rather imperfect idea of hymn singing. For many years he has been a source of great pain to the clergyman, choir and congregation, while the harmful effects of several organists have been worn out by his vocalism. His peculiarity is that he holds on the notes long after the rest of the singers let go. The effect of this persistence is to make one part of the congregation laugh and the other frown. On several occasions, being expostulated with, this man has replied that he could worship his God, and that as a part of the divine worship it was his duty to sing, and his performance on these to this day. A similar case occurred in Chicago some years ago, and the offender was indicted for disturbing a congregation. The jury found him guilty, but the extenuating circumstances that he had no purpose of disturbing the congregation, and that his only fault was an eccentric character of his vocalisation served to reverse the verdict.

THREATENING TO SHOOT A JUDGE.

In addition as to what powers were granted railway companies to acquire land, Chancellor Proudfoot, sitting at the Court at Toronto yesterday, and Judge Mackenzie illustrated the saying how careful people should be in saying any show of compulsion was used in forcing a sale of land. He was on his way to a meeting, he thought, and was met by two men who asked him if he would sell a piece of land. The men said they were acting for the railway company and they were determined to resist. After these explanations the judge (laughing) said he would not be sold. Some days after he was served with notice that he would be expropriated, because he had refused to sell.

KINGSTON MILITARY CAMP

The arrangements for all the military camps have been completed with the exception of that for this district. The corps to be in camp at this place are the 4th Prince of Wales Cavalry, Kingston, and Durham Field Battery, and the 46th, 45th, 49th, and 57th battalions of infantry. The corps which will be all this year, having been drilled last year are the 3rd Provisional Cavalry, and the 19th, 14th, and 47th battalions of infantry. The Globe says: September 5th has been selected as a probable date, and Kingston as the place; but there are objections to the latter on account of its not being centrally located, and not having suitable grounds on which many lead to its being rejected. But the writer apparently forgets that no notice has been experienced heretofore in holding camps in Kingston.

REMOVING THE SHOALS

A Government official is on the city now, the arrangements for the removal of Point Traverse shoal. Operations will be commenced as soon as possible, probably at the end of three weeks. Stone boats have been constructed. The Government grant for removing the shoals in the harbour is $12,000 a year for five years, and the total estimated cost is $64,000.
