WEDNESDAY MORNING, APRIL 3.

It is some time since we opened the Penttentiary Report, but as we are under a pledge to our readers, to say something about the appointment of Inspectors to that Institution, we have once more referred to the celebrated document with the view of discovering the Commissioners' ideas upon the subject, and turning to papes 290 and 291, we find these modest and very disinterested gentlemenwho have lately given so much of their valuable time for the paltry consideration of eight and twelve dollars per day-recommend to the the Governor General, that a Board consisting of only two members should be established, and they don't forget to recommend also, "that suitable compensation should be allowed them for their services," for four visits during the year. We shall point out pretty clearly who these two worthies are likely to be, but first of all, we must say that a more stupid idea could never enter the head of any man, unless he wished to make a snug job of the business. Who, we should like to know, is to have the casting vote, shou'd the awo proposed Inspectors differ in any matter submitted sitting, at the Court House, for their consideration? Is the management of a great public Institution to be subject to the chance of " heads or tails," or the length of a straw in such cases; or is Mr. Secretary Reeve. Brown to have a double vote when a knotty point is in debate, for we think we can show that the ex-Commissioner had himself in his eye, when he penned that part of the Report We have already remarked on the folly of Inspectors living at a distance from the Peni-, tentiary, in cases where their attendance at the Institution might be suddenly required, but independent of this objection, we think it but a poor compliment to the Reformers of Kingston, that they are not to be trusted with the that " little reliance" can be placed in them. This might be all very well Mr. Brown, were you speaking of the rabid Tories, but 'tis rather an unkind cut to your brother Reformers in this part of the Province!

We now come to what we before referred to as to the parties on whom the appointment as Penitentiary Inspectors would fall, and on turning to page 287 of the same instructive books we find the following paragraph:
