Our readers are no doubt surprised that the hitherto all-powerful George Brown should have been so signally defeated; but the House felt so indignant at the exposure made of the con duct of the late Penitentiary Commissioners, that their whole proceedings in the recent investigation, and the removal of the late Warden, before ever the enquiry into the affairs of the Penitentiary had taken place, were easily seen through, and were verily believed to have had no other object in view than to provide some of the gentry with good fat berths. To make up the sum required to satisfy the cormorant appetites of the two would-be-paid Inspectors, the bill provided that a reduction of no less than $90 per annum should be made in the pay of each of the Keepers; and these latter functionaries may thank Mr. Smith for not having been compelled to submit to so severe a loss, as had not his petition drawn the attention of the House to their proceedings, the concealment. the Penitentiary bill would have become the have been attacked by the introduction of further manufacturing operations into the Pe-

The House then went in cer. Our reason is, that in the bill in question, a great amount of duty is pointed out as required to be performed by the two worthy Inspectors, but by some oversight of the concoctor of that document, no pay is set down as a remuneration for their services, all that sort of thing being included in the unfortunate Penitentiary bill, which has been so summarily rejected, and therefore, it is not likely, that these disinterested gentlemen will undertake such arduous duties gratuitously, if indeed they ever intended to perform them to the strict letter of the law.
