THE FRIGHTFUL SCENES IN SYRIA.

(From the London Times, July 18.) The accounts received yesterday from the coast of Syria have realized all ou worst fears. On the 9th of this month the city of Damasous was attacked by the Drases, and 500 Christians are said to have periched The Consulator, with the excention of the English, were burnt down. In short, the whole place seems to have The Atlantic Telegraph Company and had his arm broken; and several others, in some special cases. been at the morey of the maranding army, the Turkish authorities having shown their usual complicity with the aggressors. The frightful event must remove the scruples of the most cautious politician. Instant acrion most take place to save the world from crimes which will be a represente it i ages. No one can tell what another week may bring forth. The next mail from Beyout may inform us that Aleppo has shared the fate of Damascus, that at Jerusalem -Christians of every nation and church, including a number of Protestant Englishmen, have been put to the sword. Whatever may have been the beginning of this movement, there can be no doubt that h has assumed a most formidable character. Yesterday it was a fend between two nountain tribes ! to-morrow it may be the onslaught of the Mussulman races on the Christians, whom recent events have enused them to look upon with increasing batred and dread. Before succor, can artive, bufere the Turk can be made to feel that Europe will stand no trifling in this matter, it may be that every village in for the crops. It would almost seem as if a spell hung over that tenowned and holy corner, of Asia, and condemned it to keep its formor fikeness, to fornish persecutors and martyrs, frenzied multitudes demanding blood, and timid Governors giving up the same land. They have been exterminated, or reduced to the condition of slaves, or forctude whom the first Caliphs found in those countries, show how active have been all these causes of depopulation.
