Mr. Newdgate decided that Cromwell was not a Sovereign, and the meh he might have a statue among the great men, it should not be among the Sovereigns. He had found that in Cromwell's time 'the cath of allegiance was abelished, and the oath ordered to be taken was to be faithful to the Commonwealth. An ancestor of his had been legal adviser to General Monk, and he was of opinion that Oliver Cromwell never had been legally, properly, or in any sense Sovereign of this conntry.
