DEATH FROM DROWNING AT INDERSOLL On Tuesday, a gentleman named Lowry Brown, aged 70 years, and who for a number of years has resided in Ingersoll, was accidentally drowned while fishing at Watson's dam. The particulars of his death are in the main a matter of conjecture, as he was alone for some time before it occurred. He had been in the town between eleven and twelve o'clock, and had arranged with a person to meet him at the dam, and the party not having fulfilled his engagement, it is supposed Mr. Brown stepped into the boat and pushed out into the middle of the dam, and it is further surmised that he, by some accident or other.
