The Englishman who lives on the Island of Monte Christo is named Taylor, and is styled the Count of Monte Christo. He owns the island, having purchased it for £400 sterling. He has resided there for six years, with two laborers, two goatherds, and four soldiers. He was supposed to favor Leopold II., and hence excited the enmity of the Garibaldians, a stray party of whom plundered his house and ravaged his property. Fortunately he had sent most of his valuable furniture, &c., to Leghorn and the damage by the incursion was compar dians were several Englishmen.
