An attempt has been made at the last two annual Vestry Meetings of St. George's Cathedral to make Pews free at Sunday solution of the Brotherhood would be soon Evening Services, and has miserably failed because part of the owners have been willing to do so, and others have refused.

> At present, if a stranger goes into a Pew is an uncertainty whether it is free or therwise. If into one the owner allows to be free he is unchallenged; but should occupy that of a refusing member, it remains with the good or bad taste of the holder to let him remain or turn him out as he has an undoubted legal right to do. It is a farce, therefore, to advertize "Free Pews" at St. George's Cathedral, when no half the owners have given consent to their being made free.

Although I am willing at all times to any one enter my Pew, as long as there room to spare, yet until a general making free Pews is declared by a unanimogs vôte of the Pew owners, I shall continue to occupy my own; but I certainly think it does harm to the Church to leave things in so anomalous a position.

I have merely written this letter to show Cathedral of an evening are liable to be practically taught the difference between free Pew and the reverse.
