HOW TO EAT WISELY.

What Food is Best-The Three Great Sources of Mischief-Meals.

As a universal rule in health, and with very rare exceptions in disease, that is best to be eaten' which the appetite craves or the taste relishes. Persons rarely err in the quality of food eaten; nature's instincts are the wisest regulators in this respect. The great sources of mischief from eating are three-quantity, frequency, rapidity, and from these come the horrible dyspepsias which make of human life a burden, a torture, a living death. By eating fast, the stomach, like a bottle being filled through a funnel, is full and overflowing before we know it. But the most important reason is, the food is swallowed before time has been allowed to divide it in sufficiently small pieces with the teeth; for, like ice in a tumbler of water, the smaller the bits are the sooner they are dissolved. It has been seen with the naked eye that if solid food is cut up in pieces small as half a pea, it digests almost as soon, without being chewed at all, as if it had been well masticated. The best plan, therefore, is for all persons to thus comminute their food, for even if it is well chewed the comminution is no injury, while it is of very great importance in case of hurry, forgetfulness or bad teeth. Cheerful conversation prevents rapid eating. It requires about five hours for a common meal to dissolve and pass out of the stomach, during which time this organ is incessantly at work, when it must have repose, as any other muscle or set of muscles, after such a length of effort. Hence persons should not eat within less than a five-hours' interval. The heart itself is at rest more than one-third of its time. The brain perishes without repose. Never force food on the stomach. All are tired when night comes. Every muscle of the body is weary and looks to the bed; but just as we lie down to rest every other part of the body, if we by a hearty meal give the stomach five hours' work, which in its weak state requires a much longer time to perform than at an earlier hour of the day, it is like imposing upon a servant a full day's labor just at the close of a hard day's work. Hence the unwisdom of eating heartily late in the day or evening; and no wonder it has cost many a man his life.

Always breakfast before work or exercise. No laborers or active persons should eat an atom later than sundown, and then it should not be over half the midday meal. Persons of sedentary habits or who are at all ailing should take absolutely nothing for supper beyond a single piece of cold stale bread and butter, or a ship biscuit with a single cup of warm drink. Such a supper will always give better sleep and prepare for a heartier breakfast, with the advantage of having the exercise of the whole day to grind it up and extract its nutriment. Never eat without an inclination. - Hall's Journal of Health.

Coffee Taverns in New York.

There has been a good deal of talk lately about setting up coffee taverns in New York on the plan now common in London. None of the papers seem to be aware that our German fellow citizens have been a good many years ahead of us in this commendable work. Ever since I owned my own time in New York I have been familiar with certain cozy quarters over on the east side, where, at the price of a dime one may linger an afternoon away over a cup of coffee and more papers and magazines than one can get through by the hardest kind of reading. Thousands of men who never enter the beer shop while away their evenings in these places. Chess or dominoes help literature to eke the entertainment out, and one can munch cake or biscuit or bread and cheese, if one is hungry.

The same sort of places in other sections of the town would undoubtedly gather a profitable clientele. But, like these, they must be attractive in appearance and comfortable in their appointments. The handicap to philanthropic experiments of this order with us is that we make them ugly and cheap looking. Men do not like to be reminded that they are regarded as too poor to have any elegance wasted on them. You must give them as cheery a welcome as the barroom does if you want to convert them to coffee. -Alfred Trumble in New York News.

A Story Without End.

We are half a mind to begin to write a story that may never end, founded on facts that are ever obvious. Hippodromus, taking his morning walk in the streets of Lucignano, comes upon Theodectes, a laborer, and says to him: "Why are you always at work?" Theodectes answers: "I am always at work to get money to buy food to give me strength to do more work that I may get more money to buy more food to get more strength to do more work to get more money to buy more food to get more strength to do more work to get more money to buy"- This is the beginning of the story without end, and the facts on which it is founded, they are without end also.-Winsted (Conn.) Press.

A Mechanic's Success.

Some years ago a mechanic near New Haven was riding in a railway train and was jolted and jarred as in the early days of travel passengers were apt to be. He didn't fret and fume as the other passengers did, but began to study and experiment with a view to making a spring that would reduce the jolting to a minimum. He at last succeeded, and his spring was adopted by every railroad in the country. He is no longer a poor young mechanic. His name is Carlos French, and he has just been elected to congress from the New Haven district.

From Lobbyist to Porter. Pinckney Robertson, a bright mulatte, who during reconstruction day in South Carolina was a power in politics there, and, while lobbying at the state capital, held four different clerkships, each one paying him $6 a day, is now a porter in Atlanta at $4 a week. -New York Sun.

The Once Famous Singer.

It was reported that Alice Oates, the once famous comic opera singer, is dying in want in Philadelphia, but this story is denied. Although she will not probably live long, she is surrounded with every comfort and has many triends to care for her. New York Graphic

A Ballad Composer.

"Harrison Millard, the ballad composer," says The New York Sun, "is frequently seen at the 'at homes' of ladies who hold weekly gatherings. He is a tall, well built man, with grayish hair, and is celebrated for a rather languid manner that many young men envy."

A Canine Candidate.

Campbell county, Dakota, politicians will set up a better class of candidates next time. An intelligent pointer dog run by the indignant citizens on an independent ticket lacked only three votes of being elected district at-torney.—Chicago Herald.
