Whist-A Hen is On!

The call for a meeting of the reformers of Frontenac on Saturday afternoon in Kingston is well timed. It preceded the dissolution of parliament and the announcement of the election but a very few days. The political cauldron is again boiling and there is likely to be an interesting meeting on Saturday.

He Will Probably Accept.

The conservatives will hold a ratification meeting on Friday or Saturday evening. The delegates having nominated John Mc-Intyre there is little doubt that he will accept the honor, provided the convention sustains the nomination, and Sir John cannot be induced to abandon "the other arrangements.

Will Attend a Funeral.

Hon, G A. Kirkpatrick left this afternoon for Montreal in order to attend the funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Molson, grandmother of Mrs. Kirkpatrick. The Government at Fault.

The Canadian Engine and Locomotive works company has had to discharge a number of men simply because work cannot be secured for them. Every mechanic who goes out must remember that if the dominion government got its machinery for public works built here, instead of in the United States, there would be plenty of employment

Last Night's Spread.

At the conclusion of the caucus held by the conservatives last evening, Mr. James H. Metcalfe, M.P.P., invited about sixty of his friends to partake of an oyster supper at Collendar hotel. The spread was got up in first-class style and a credit to Mr. Doolan. A programme of toasts was submitted, and addresses delivered by Mr. Metcalfe, Hon. G. A. Kirkpatrick, Messrs. Elliott and Webster. The company dispersed about midnight.

He's a Liberal, Too!

H. McK. Mullholland, inspector of the trade association of Toronto, a wholesale and retail mercantile agency, is in the city and will proceed to open an office here. Mr. Mullholland is a nephew of the late member for Halton. Mr. McCraney, liberal, who has been re-nominated and whose popularity is very great. ' In that constituency the conservative nomination is being peddled about with little hope of any strong man accepting it.

A Wedding in Toronto.

Last evening a popular event occurred in Toronto, the marriage of Mr. J. B. McKay, one of the principals of the Dominion business college, with Miss Gertie Ferguson, fourth daughter of the late Henry Ferguson, merchant tailor of this city. The wedding took place at the residence of F. X. Cousineau, the groom being attended by Mr. E. S. Boyden, and the bride by Miss Cousineau. The ceremony was attended by the sincerest good wishes. Mr. and Mrs. McKay spend some days among friends in the west of the province, and, returning here, will reside in one of the new brick houses on Clergy street, near Brock. They will be accorded a warm welcome by their many friends.

PREPARED FOR THE FRAY

MR. A. GUNN IS AGAIN NOMINATED FOR THE COMMONS.

Rousing Meeting-Every Person Present Unanimous for the Old Member-Addresses Made by Young Liberals-Dr. Mackenzie Shows What Side he is on-Eilbeck and Thompson Setting the Heather on Fire.

There was a rousing meeting at reform hall last evening, and, amid the greatest enthusiasm, Alexander Gunn was re-nominated as the liberal candidate for the dominion house. Shortly after 8 o'clock the president looked over the great company and intimated the object for which they had gathered together. On two previous occasions Mr. Gunn had defeated prominent opponents, and with him again as their choice they could "put to the run" any one whom the conservative party could pit against him. Amid much demonstration the gentlemen present declared their willingness to at once nominate a candidate. No meeting of delegates was necessary to bring forward their standard-bearer.

Mr. Mayor Carson was very heartily greeted as he rose, and in a few well-chosen words nominated Mr. Gunn, and the name was received with loud cheers. The mayor asserted that Mr. Gunn could carry the re form banner to victory against all comers. He should be supported because of his desire to improve the city, of his great interest in all young men who sought his aid, and of his endeavours, to make their schemes successful. Activity and energy should be exhibited by the liberals in order to have a supporter in the house in accord with the next government for, of course, the present government was about to be overthrown. (Cheers.) He urged the electors to put their like veterans, and send forth a shot from their Gunn that would scatter the foe.

Dr. Phelan said that they were on the eve of a great struggle, and that it was necessary to have a strong man to support. They had such a person in Mr. Gunn. He referred to the enormous deficit of the government, spoke of its maladministration in the North-West, and concluded by seconding the nomination so ably proposed by Mayor Carson. (Applause.)

The president asked for other nominations, but as none was forthcoming the motion was put and carried by a standing vote, accentuated by rousing cheers.

Mr. Samuel Harper, a member of the firm of A. Gunn & Co., said that from correspondence recently to hand he was authorized to accept the nomination on behalf of Mr. Gunn. (Cheers.) He was proud that on this, the third occasion, the nomination of Mr. Gunn had been tendered in such a hearty and enthusiastic manner. He pointed out that hard work was necessary in order to retain the seat, and he urged all to be up and doing. The indications were that an imported man (laughter) would have to be met, as all the local men seemed to have rejected the proffered nomination.

Mr. John Carruthers was loudly called for, but the "old war horse" begged to be excused. He had not the strength to fittingly address them.

AN HONOR PASSING AROUND,

Ex-Mayor Whiting was glad that Mr. Gunn was to be the candidate, for he was a piece of artillery that the enemy seemed most unwilling to face. (Applause.) It had been stated, and energetically circulated, that Mr. Gunn would not be the liberal candidate, but the wish was father to the thought. He referred to the extreme modesty of the conservative candidates who had been proposed, and said that it seemed as though many of them desired to have it to say to their children hereafter, that they could have had the conservative nomination once on a time but that their extreme modesty prevented them from accepting it. looked as though the honor would be pass ed around and enjoyed by all the members of the party. When "the foremost statesman" was defeated the other members of the party had been taught the need of discretion at any rate. (Cheers.) He felt satisfied that whoever was placed in the field, against Mr. Gunn, would meet defeat. The present contest was to his mind the most important that had occurred since confederation. He referred to the great increase of the debt, and pointed out that while the United States had a debt of $120 per family of five persons, Canada had a debt of $234 for the same number of persons. The increase in the public debt in eight years had been from $50,000,000 to $220, 000,000, while the annual expenditure had jumped from $23,000,000 to $39,000,000. Then he expatiated upon the difference between the Mowat and Macdonald governments. While the Mowat adminstration urged a scrutiny of the expenditure, and defied any one to show dishonesty or corruption, the other had so degraded the political tone of the country that if the Pacific scandal only now burst upon the people no ferment or excitement would be occasioned. If the Macdonald government were returned it would mean that the people were proud to have hands put in the public chest, and the end would be as Mr. Blake had predicted, there would be, "no country to save." The fate of the government depended upon the electors of Ontario, and it would be a sad thing if they reversed at the polls the verdict they had pronounced in the local election in December last. Then they spoke out for honest government. He could hear on all sides the victorious footfalls of the reform legions and it was for the men of Ontario to push the battle to the gates. the citizens of Ontario, and especially of Kingston, were true to their interests they wouldsurely secure a victory. He concluded his speech amid rousing cheers. CROSSED TO THE OTHER SIDE. Ex-Mayor McKelvey said they had in the hall a gentleman who made his first appearance there. He referred to Dr. Mackenzie, and asked him to address the meeting. The audience cheered most enthusiastically. The doctor advanced to the front, amid applause, bowed his acknowledgements, and said: "I can assure you all this is the last thing I expected when I entered this hall-to be asked to speak. I do so with much diffidence, but I would be showing discourtesy if I did not answer your hearty call. I can agree with Mr. Whiting when he says we have arrived at a crisis in the affairs of the country, and it behooves every man, who has any interest in the future greatness of Canada, to assist in remov. ing from our midst a government which is both extravagant and corrupt. (Cheers. There is an immense field to consider, and the subject could be made an endless theme, and countless charges could be formulated. These the electors have constantly brought before them through the press. I will not take up the time of the meeting in going over any of them. In entering this campaign you must be cautious and careful;

you must be organized from the start. If you do your work carefully I am quite satisfied that Mr. Gunn will be returned with a larger majority than ever before. (Cheers.) In Mr. Gunn we have an honest and independent man; a man whom we can trust, a man who is not owned by anybody or any corporation, (cheers,) a man who has indeed grown up in our city, and acquired wealth by honest industry; a man who has combined in him all the elements that give respect to wealth when it is honestly made. (Loud cheers.) Mr. Gunn requires nothing from you. You are honoring your selves by electing him, for I can assure you it is difficult to find men like him in politics. Now-a-days many Canadians make politics a business. They go in to make money. This is not the way things are done in England. There men go into politics after they have made their money. They first make names for themselves, and then seek repose from the cares of business by taking upon themselves the cares of state. (Cheers.) I have been in Canada long enough to find out that in the conservative ranks there are many fellows who are not serving the people honestly but serving themselves. (Cheers.) These are not my convictions alone ; they are the convictions of men of riper experience than even mine. The time has now arrived to make a change. (Cheers.) I have expressed myself very plainty, but I am not afraid to express myself on any occasion. (Cheers.) You know where I am to be found (cheers) and you can depend upon me doing my little utmost to secure the return of Mr. Gunn on the evening of February, 22nd." The doctor sat down amid loud applause.

SPEECHES FROM HARD WORKERS. Mr. John McKelvey said that if talking would put in a candidate they would stop all night and talk. The pleasantest feature of the evening was the address of Dr. Mackenzie, a man who had hitherto supported the conservative government. They had it from a gentleman, who knew what he was shoulders to the wheel; to go into the battle | talking about, that the present government was very corrupt. Had a grit made that statement, many would have not believed him, but much weight must follow the address of a conservative, one sickened by the abuses of his own party, one who sought tohave the reins of power transferred to other hands than those now holding them.

Mr. C. F. Gildersleeve wanted every liberal in Kingston to see that nothing was left undone to secure the return of Mr. Gunn and a liberal government. He was delighted to hear it expressly declared that Mr.

Gunn would again be the liberal candidate. Ald. J. D. Thompson said, after the applause his appearance created had subsided, that they always knew where to find him. (A voice-In Frontenac ward.) The strongest speech of the evening was that made by Mr. Harper, who had declared that Mr. Gunn would be the liberal candidate. The conservative press had industriously circulated the report that the liberals could not rely upon Mr. Gunn as a candidate, that he was tired of parliamentary life, but the very opposite was the case and they now had a candidate who would lead the party to victory. He urged the liberals not to be too self-reliant, not to think that they would have a weak candidate against them. If they showed any carelessness the seat might be lost to them. The conservatives, in going into the field, would be backed by men of energy and plenty of boodle, neither of which, as the past had shown, was to be despised. He asked the liberals to at once organize, to be prepared to say on Mr. Gunn's return that they had not only tendered the nomination to him but canvassed for him, and done nearly all the work necessary, thus showing their appreciation of his labors during the past eight years.

Mr. R. J. Eilbeck was loudly applauded, and his vigorous address was constantly cheered. He was a supporter of Mr. Gunn and anything he could do, in his quiet way, would be done. He jocularly referred to the coming conservative candidate and added : "If Brother John Gaskin is to be the unfortunate victim that is to face our Gunn, the Lord help him." (Cheers and laughter.) The ex-alderman said he would not discuss the financial-no not that-the rottenness of Canada, but would say that no country on the face of the earth had been dragged through such muck and mire as Canada had been, (Cheers.) headed by a man whom Kingston had wiped out and caused to go away out to sundown for a seat. He had been elected by squaws, and the squaws were ashamed of their act to this very day. (Cheers.) The speaker asserted that right about Kingston, within a radius of one hundred miles, the worst tory nest in Canada was to be found. "Let us arise," he added, "and wipe out this disgrace. Let us start the ball a-rolling to-night in this city." (Cheers.) Reference was made to Doctor Mackenzie's address, and that gentleman congratulated upon his intelligence and discernment. All honest, intelligent, conservatives were of his opinion, that Canada had long enough suffered from a corrupt government. He sat down amid applause, long continued. Immediately afterwards the ward committees were organized and amongst those to seek admission to them were several former conservatives.

MUCH PROPERTY DESTROYED.

A Coal Oil Lamp Upsets and Burns Up Charles Hyssop's Horses.

On Monday evening a son of Charles Hyssop, of the middle road, Pittsburg township, went to his father's barn to arrange for the feeding of the animals in it for the night. He carried a coal oil lamp in his hand, and left it on the floor while he went into the hay mow. It is supposed that while thus engaged a steer entered the barn and upset the lamp. Anyway the first thing he knew the flames were leaping about him. With all possible haste he ran for his life, and escaped from the burning building through a window in the gable. He at once turned his attention to the saving of seven horses in the barn. He unloosened them but, affrighted, they plunged wildly into the flames and all but two of them perished. Those who remember the fierceness of the gale of Monday night can imagine how rapidly the flames were spread. By the time the young man had released the horses it was found that an adjacent barn, in which were twenty-five head of cattle, was also on fire. Only four of the cattle escaped; the others were roasted. Neighbors gathered and made strong efforts to save the property, but their labors were futile. There mowing machines, farm implements, harness and other articles, besides fodder and grain, were destroyed. Mr. Hyssop's loss is about $3,000, on which he has a small insurance. Mr. Hyssop, who is at present lumbering in Olden, has been telegraphed to return

PHILOMATHEAN SOCIETY.

An Fxciting Time at the Business College

-Result of the Election. Last evening a meeting of the members of the Philomathean society, connected with the dominion business college, was held in the practical department for the purpose of electing a president, vice-president, critic, and members of the executive committee for the session. There were over a hundred students present. More attention, however, was paid to the election of a president than to the other positions, and considerable wire-pulling was indulged in. The candidates were G. K. Dean, son of Judge Dean Lindsay, and H. Jack, of this city. Both were confident of success.

The meeting was called to order by Presi dent Conley shortly after eight o'clock Mr. McGill was interrupted in his reading of the minutes by Mr. Jack, who contended that the first order of business was the election. Mr. Dean explained that Mr. Jack's objection was raised in order to prevent friends of his, who intended to join the society, doing so, and preventing them voting for him. The minutes had always been read at election meetings of the society, and persons allowed to join before the voting took place. If the president ruled against him he would be defeated. There was no doubt about that. Mr. Jack intimated that if Mr. Dean had studied the constitution he would not now have been trapped. He would have had his friends connected with the society before it was too late. The president ruled that, according to the constitution, the voting would have to proceed. Mr. Dean announced that he had resigned the candidacy and did not desire his friends to vote for him. The election was called and the returning officer, McGill, was kept busy for over two hours in recording the votes. The scrutineers were Messrs. B. Dunlop and A. B. Carle. The returns showed the following result :

President-Mr. H. Jack. Vice-President-Mr. J. Sherlock. Critic-Mr. A. F. Newlands. Executive committee-Messrs. A. Bajus,

M. Kemp, W. J. Allen and S. McKim. The vote was: For president, Jack, 78; G. Dean, 43. For vice-president, J. Sherlock, 64; M. Jones, 49; E. Arnold, 34. For critic, A. Newlands, 56; S. H. Clark, 31 W. A. Dickson, 15. For committee, A. Bajus, 62; M. Kemp, 53; W. J. Allen, 42; S. McKim, 42; Clapp, 41; Reynolds, 41. After the voting Messrs. Horsey and E. Mullen gave humorous recitations, and speeches were made by the newly-elected president and his opponent, Mr. Dean, and Capt. Fitz Hourigan, of Picton. The meeting broke up at 11 o'clock.

The Annual Meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association.

The annual meeting of the Y.W.C. association, yesterday, was fairly attended by ladies interested in the work, notwithstanding the snow storm. The business meeting began at 3 p.m., the president, Mrs. D. Ross, presiding. The annual reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and adopted. Interesting reports were also read by the conveners of the several committees.

The executive committee was then elected, consisting of the following members: Mrs. Bain, Miss Bawden, Miss Betts, Miss Burrowes, Mrs. R. J. Chown, Mrs. Cochrane, Mrs. H. Cunningham, Mrs. Drummond, Mrs. Goodwin, Miss Goodwin, Mrs. Grafftey, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. Hague, Mrs. Hobart, Miss Holmes, Miss Inkster, Mrs. Marshall, Miss Marshall, Miss Machar, Mrs. Maxwell, Mrs. McGillivray, M. D., Miss McMahon, Mrs. Neale, Miss Polson, Miss Renton, Mrs. D. Ross, Mrs. B. Robertson, Mrs. Skinner, Mrs. Stirling, Miss Trenhiele, Miss Welch. After the business had been despatched the meeting was briefly addressed by Principal Grant, Rev. S. G. Bland, and Mr. R. V. Rogers, Principal Grant expressed his satisfaction at hearing of the good work mentioned in the report, even though it had not been precisely in the direction at first contemplated, reminding his hearers that it was not well to adhere too closely to cut and dry schemes, but to following openings for work wherever these presented themselves; and also that most good is always done by individual working and personal visitation. Mr. Bland expressed his warm sympathy with the work of the society, remarking that life does not always take precisely the same mode of developing itself, and that the work of a society cannot always be exactly what was anticipated. Mr. Rogers communicated some interesting facts, in reference to the New York Y.W.C.A., and its work, and added some practical suggestions. The executive committee will meet to complete the election of office bearers on Wednesday, Feb. 2nd, which members will please bear in

At the meeting yesterday it was suggested that as so many of the ladies of the city had assisted the Y.M.C.A. to make their rooms comfortable and attractive, these might now perform the same good office for the rooms devoted to the use of their own sex, which very much need some improvements.

The report of the society will appear to-

"TURN THE RASCALS OUT."

A Ringing Speech by One of the Members of the Young Liberals' Club.

Toronto Globe. An informal meeting of liberals was held last night, at which the plans and prospects of the coming campaign were talked over. A number of gentlemen from different parts of the country were present, and the most hopeful opinions as to the result of the contest were expressed.

In the course of the evening a vigorous address was made by Mr. E. H. Britton. He said : "It has been said that the liberal party has no watchword in this campaign, no rallying cry. We have better than that, we have a platform, whose foundations are laid upon principles, the maintenance of which is necessary to the preservation of confederation. We form a party whose record is a continued story of reforms accomplished, of evil things laid low and good put in the place thereof.' We have, in short, a cause that is righteous and a leader of whom we are proud. This surely ought to be sufficient, but if we need a war-cry by all means let us have it. Many suggest themselves, but one is perhaps better than the others. In the United States not long ago the government became intolerably cerrupt—as our government has-and many right-thinking persons of all classes joined the party in opposition in demanding that this government should make room for a better and more honest one. The ery in that great campaign was 'Turn the rascals out,' and the party that adopted it achieved a tremendous success. Why should we not employ the same phrase? It fits the case exactly. It serves as a text upon which to base our whole argument. They are rascals—these boodlers, these men whose mismanagement provoked rebellion, these men of jobs and blind shares and extravagance. Surely they are rascals, and surely now, if ever, is the time to turn them out.

QUEEN'S ENDOWMENT.

Resolutions in Reference to Extending the Usefulness of the University. The following resolutions were adopted at a recent meeting of the Queen's university endowment association, Toronto branch:

Moved by Mr. James Maclennan, Q.C., and seconded by Mr. William Henderson, "In order to place Queen's university in a position of permanence and efficiency it is expedient that steps be at once taken by its friends to increase the endowment by a further sum of $250,000, as indicated in the recent address of the principal at the opening of the present session." Carried.

It was moved by the Rev. D.J. Macdonnell, R.D., and seconded by Mr. William Mitchell, "In view of the action of the government in co-operating with denominational institutions in Toronto, we are of opinion that it is reasonable to expect that the government should co-operate with Queen's university to further the interests of higher education in Eastern Ontario by the establishment at Kingston of a school of practical science, or in some other way that may be found most in accordance with economy, the development of the industries of that section of the province, and the large share of our university work which Queen's isdoing without cost to the public." Carried.
