SCIENCE AND PROGRESS.

INTERESTING ARCHÆOLOGICAL DIS-COVERY IN GEORGIA.

Ingenious Contrivance for Detecting Fire Damp - Telescopic Photography Provides Amusement for Amateurs and a New Method for Practical Purposes.

A new method of amusement for the numerous and increasing class of amateur pho tographers is provided in telescopic photog raphy, which is also susceptible of employment for many practical purposes. The first of the accompanying cuts, taken from La Nature, shows the arrangement of a telescopic camera.

TELESCOPE AND CAMERA. Though the clearness of the view obtained will be affected by the quality of lenses employed, a common spyglass will answer well. This is adjusted to the proper focus, and attached either with strips of cloth or paper or with a brass screw-joint, to the objective of the camera. By drawing out the camera the photograph is made larger, but the increased size is obtained at a sacrifice of clearness and sharpness of definition. With a very superior instrument the camera lenses may even be dispensed with, and satisfactory results obtained by focusing the view upon the plate with the telescope alone.

This method of photography has much practical value. Through it the details of mountain peaks and inaccessible objects can be, as it were, brought near to one and fixed upon the photographic plate. More satisfactory pictures of the earth's surface than those hitherto obtained, can be taken by aeronauts from their balloons; in military and naval operations the movements of the enemy can be photographed.

VIEW OF CASTLE TURRETS.

The second illustration given is a copy from a photograph made by a French amateur, of the turrets of an old castle in Savoy, at a distance of three-quarters of a mile, with ninety seconds exposure.

Significance of Tattooing.

According to a recent report of the Vienna Anthropological society, Dr. M. Halberlandt does not believe that tattooing was at first intended merely as an ornament. He attributes it to a religious significance, the figures described on the skin having some reference to the totemic or ancestral god of the clan, and serving as a protection to the wearer. In latter days, when this meaning had faded, the figure became a mere style of personal decoration. Dr. Halberlandt draws a distinction between tattooing, in which the figures are delineated by inserting a fine pointed instrument repeatedly into the skin, and what he calls, from an Australian word, the manka, in which process the lines are scratched or cut, and the coloring matter rubbed in. This distinction he maintains as important as an ethnological criterion.

Archæological Discovery.

Mr. J. W. Walker is credited with having discovered, on the south side of Pine mountain, Georgia, nearly 200 feet above the famous Corundum mine, a site where the ancient inhabitants of that region manufactured their tale vessels for cooking. Undoubted evidences appear of the use of stone implements in the work. The vessels were blocked out and hollowed before being broken from the ledge. Many of the remaining fragments are honeycombed by exposure. Similar phenomena are familiar elsewhere to archeologists, in instance of which may be cited quarries in southern California, also several sites in the District of Columbia

Detection of Fire Damp in Mines. Most of the ingenious contrivances that have been introduced from time to time for the prompt detection of fire damp in mines have been of a somewhat complicated nature. The latest of these brought to notice, nowever, is described as so simple in principle and construction as to excite wonder at its not having been thought of before. An India rubber ball, with a hole in it, is squeezed flat in the hand and held in the place suspected of fire damp while released, and allowed to suck in a sample of the air; the ball is then directed toward a safety lamp and again squeezed, when the telltale bine flame shows if it contains any inflammable vapor.

Stopping the Action of the Reart. Physicians and others interested in such matters, will doubtless remember the case of the late Dr. Groux, of Brooklyn, who claimed to have the power of stopping the action of the heart at pleasure. And now Dr. Lydston, of Chicago, in a note to The American Practitioner and News, asserts that he possesses the same power, and that he has demonstrated it to members of the medical profes-

Gases from Indigested Food. In a recent number of Science reference was made to a remarkable case in which the breath of an individual, or rather, the cructations from his stomach took fire when brought in contact with a lighted match. This case, which was reported in The Medical Record has called forth communications from physicians that make it appear the phenomenon is not so rare as was at first supposed. In one case of disordered digestion the patient emitted inflammable gas from the mouth, which, upon analysis, was found to be largely composed of marsh gas. In another case the gns was sulphuretted hydrogen. A case is reported in The British Medical Journal, in which, while blowing out a match, the patient's breath caught fire with a noise like the report of a platol, which was loud enough to awaken his wife. One evening, while a confirmed dyspeptic was lighting his pipe, an eructation of gas from his stomach occurred, and the ignited gas burned his mustache and line.

In Ewald's book on indigestion the analysis of the gas in one of these cases was, carbonic acid, 20.57; hydrogen, 20.57; carburetted hydrogen, 10.75; oxygen, 6.72; nitrogen, 41.38; sulphuretted hydrogen, a trace. The origin of these gases is undoubtedly the undigested food, which in these cases undergoes decomposition.

When Cornwallis Surrendered.

At the surrender of Cornwallis the American troops were drawn up on the right and the French troops on the left of the road along which the Dritish army marched in solemn silence. Lafayette, noticed that the English soldiers looked only at the Frenchin in on the left and ignored the American light infantry, the pride of his heart, and he, determined to bring their "eyes to the right, " andered the band to strike up "Yankee Doodle,"

"Then," said he, narrating the change, "they did look at us, but were not very well pleased."-Youth's Companion
