HEALTH IS WEALTH.

DRE. C. WEST'S
NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT

The glass tube produces these effects, at first, by attracting these light bodies into contact with it, and then repelling them away from it.

Sealing wax, and many other substances, when rubbed, will act on light bodies just as glass does. This peculiar state into which the surface of the glass is brought by rubbing is called the state of electrical excitement, or electrified.

By attention to these simple principles many curious tricks may be performed, very surprising to those who know little or nothing of the real cause of the marvel.

A GYMNASTIC EXERCISE USEFUL IN EVERY DAY LIFE.

An Easy Way of Ascertaining the Breadth of a River—A Very Interesting Lesson in Natural History Introducing the Horned Frog.

Among curious animals native to the western part of North America is the so called horned frog or horned toad, which is neither frog nor toad, but a species of lizard. Though of repulsive appearance, the horned frog, of which a picture is here given, is not venomous, and neither bites nor stings. This curious animal has a body much flattened and covered with numerous spine like scales, a triangular head well armed with sharp spines, and a short, triangular tail bearing a row of sharp spines along the margin. The general color is dark gray (though some are brownish), marked with black; the under parts are of a silvery white. These animals are insect eaters.

HORNED FROG.

There are at least six different kinds or species of this frog, all of which are natives of western North America—one species being found as far east as Arkansas. They abound in Texas, Arizona and New Mexico to California, and as far north as Oregon. The cut represents, according to The American Agriculturist, one of the easternmost species, also the one most numerous and best known. In the regions named these animals are so common that they attract little attention, except from travelers who see them for the first time. They are said to take refuge in their burrows to hibernate or pass the winter in a dormant state.

Measuring the Width of a River. The approximate breadth of a river, or other stream, may be determined by means of the brim of a hat or the peak of a cap and this can be done by a boy as well as a man.

THE ANGLES ABB AND CBB ARE EQUAL. The person desiring to ascertain this fact must place himself at the edge of one bank of the river and lower the brim of his hat, or peak of his cap, till he finds the edge just cuts the other bank; then after placing the hand under the chin, he must turn round steadily till he faces some level ground on his own side of the river, and observe when the edge of the peak again meets the ground. The measure of this distance will be very nearly the breadth of the river.

To Excite Electricity.

If a thick glass tube be taken in the hand, rubbed briskly with a dry woolen cloth or a silk handkerchief, and then brought near to light substances, as small pieces of paper, small balls of elder pith, etc., lying on a table, what will be observed? The little pieces of paper or pith balls will fly into contact with the glass tube, and then dart off again. They will continue to fly up and down for some time.

The downward leap is a gymnastic operation that many have involuntarily to perform in some emergency of actual life. It is therefore well to become skilled in it by practice. Of the number of people mutilated or killed by jumping from heights in cases of fire or other calamities, some at least might have escaped unhurt, had they only known how to set about the undertaking. The downward leap is accomplished in the following manner: Having mounted to the height from which you are to leap down, stand with your feet together, the toes pointed forward, not outward. Close your fists at your sides and raise yourself gradually on your tip toe, bending the knees and raising the hands as you do so (see illustration); on bending for the third time, drop gently off the elevation (carefully avoiding anything like a spring), and as you descend through the air straighten the body, throwing the arms upward as much as possible. As soon as the points of your toes touch the ground bend the knees forward to break the impetus of the fall. In practicing, take care to increase the height from which you leap very gradually, and never attempt a deeper jump till you are quite perfect in the previous ones.
