A Meeting at Deseronto.

It is reported that Hon. Mackenzie Bowell and Juo. White, and probably several others great guns, will address a meeting in Deseconto on Monday evening, and that they will remain in that town on polling day to control the workingmen, who are inclined to throw John White overboard. In former contests in East Hastings, when the Desoconto vote was not quite such an important factor as now, John White was accustomed to call the honest workingmen Rathbun's "mules." As the hardy voters of Deseronto now express it, the "mules" will kick out on polling day with results disastrons to John White's ambition.

THE OPENING CARNIVAL.

LOTS OF ENJOYMENT AT THEROY-AL RINK LAST EVENING.

Shouts of Laughter Resounding Through the Air-the Episode in a Young Man's Career-Costumes of the Many Skaters -A Mysterious Lady-Who Was She?

Captain Dix, proprietor of the Royal skating rink, on the Regiopolis college grounds held his initial carnival last evening, and, notwithstanding that the weather was not such as is desirable on occasions of this kind, it was financially a success. A happier, or jollier gathering of ladies and gentlemen has not been seen in this city for a long-time. The rink was brilliantly lighted by four electric sparks and the music of the band of "A" Battery had an inspiring effect upon the assembly. At an early hour the most expert skaters "collected on the rink, and large numbers of spectators took possession of the seats that had been arranged along the banks of the glassy plane for their comfort. At 9 o'clock all the masqueraders had arrived, and soon a mass of gaudily dressed humanity whirled about the rink. It was an endless procession, and in it was every conceivable variety of colour. Captain Dix acted efficiently as floor manager and kept his patrons in excellent order. Some of the costumes were very pretty while others were A tory of Ottawa, in writing to a friend simply ridiculous. Falls were not very frequent, but the reporter cannot refrain from referring to an amusing incident which occurred during the evening. At 9:30 o'clock the band struck up a lively tune and the skaters animated by the music pushed their steels over the glassy surface vigorously. Shouts of merry laughter rent the air and could be heard at the market square. young man, representing a dude of the lat est make, with clothes that fitted him admirably, and undoubtedly made expressly for the carnival, attracted considerable attention. His right optic was shaded by a glass, connected with his vest by a piece of silk cord, and his head was concealed by a Christy stiff. He seemed to be very conceited, but a glance at him as he moved about was sufficient to determine that he was only a beginner in the art of skating. "Isn't he a darling!" ironically remarked three pretty little maids, just fresh from school. He heard them, doffed his hat, and smiled his prettiest. "What is it?" said one of Peck's bad boys, playing the charac ter of a "fifth ward chicken," as he shot by the corset-laced young man. He paid no attention to the remark, passing the urchin. He was heading for a fair damsel, dressed as a "girl of the period," and his attention was too much engrossed in the pursuit to hear any encomiums that were made about him. He reached the maid, made an attempt to raise her arm, missed it, tripped on a chip, and, with hands and feet in the air, he fell in a heap at the lady's heels. His hat floated from his head, and his eye-glass went the full length of the cord that held it. In falling he screamed, which attracted the girl's attention. She looked over her right shoulder, saw the dude on his back, and mockingly laughed at his calamity. The spectators and skaters, who saw the young man fall, were highly amused. His position at the time of his misfortune, and the attitude which the lady, whom he was trying to impress, struck, is strikingly illustrated by the following picture, outlined by our artist.

No other incidents occurred during the evening worthy of note. R. G. Ford's get up of 'Grandpa and I, was capital. The curiosity of the spectators was greatly amused by the appearance of a very tall lady, six feet three, a graceful skater. Who she was none knew. Everybody made enquiries about her, none being more inquisi tive than the reporters. One of the scribes was told on the quiet that the figure was that of Harvey Macarow, Appended is a list of the costumes, though a good many failed to hand in their names, and hence are not included in it :

ADDINGTON NOMINATION.

A Quiet Time at Harrowsmith-Lawyers on the Stump.

There was a large attendance at Harrowsmith on Tuesday when candidates for the dominion parliament were nominated. J B. Walkem, of Kingston, returning officer, presided. The nomination papers and necessary deposits were made for J. W. Bell, conservative, and Henry T. Shibley, liberal. At two o'clock J. D. Ham, Newburg, president of the conservative association, was appointed chairman and addresses followed. Mr. Ham apologized for Mr. Bell's absence on account of ill-health. The first speaker was H. T. Shibley, the liberal candidate, who, in an able way, dealt with the leading questions of the day. He regretted very much that Mr. Bell was not able to be present, and then attacked the great increase of the national debt, and also our annual expenditures, the extravagance of the government and the granting of timber limits to favorites, and the criminal neglect in the north-west by which many valuable lives were lost and an immense amount of money squandered. During his speech he was frequently interrupted by applause, which proved that the assemblage was with him. Mr. Shibley took his seat after a speech which was acknowledged by all to be very able. His friends feel proud of him and his chance of success is growing brighter every

John McIntyre, Q.C., Kingston, spoke on behalf of Mr. Bell. He first gave himself a puff by telling about Rideau ward and its great wealth, how it always returned him away at the head of the polls at municipal elections, and then spoke of the benefits of the national policy and how the country was flourishing under it. He cited the cot ton and knitting mills of Kingston as evi dences, but he did not even mention the car works. He alluded to Mr. Britton being present, and referred to him as the rejected of Addington.

B. M. Britton was well received, and devoted a few minutes to the previous speaker. He gave him a well-deserved castigation. He discussed the boodle brigade, the rebellion, the gerrymander and franchise acts, and showed the fallacy of the cry of the national policy being in danger. His argument was logical throughout.

R. T. Walkem said that he was an independent elector, that he never solicited any favors from the government. He acknowledged that there were dishonest men in the government, but contended that corruption had not been proven against Sir John A. Macdonald. He also referred to the prosperity of the country at the present time, and claimed that the national policy was the cause of it.

H. M. Deroche, Napanec, made an eloquent appeal to the electors why they should support H. T. Shibley, Edward Blake, and honest government. He was loudly cheered during his address, showing how pleased the electors were to hear their exmember. Mr. Deroche made the speech of the day.

J. T. Millar, M.P.P., was present, but did not take the platform. Cheers were given for the different candidates, and the meeting dispersed. Everything passed off very quietly, except a few roughs interrupt. ed Mr. Shibley while speaking. J. D. Ham is to be congratulated on the impartial man ner in which he discharged his duties.

H. T. Shibley has probably done the hardest work within two weeks of any can didate in the dominion. He has held as a rule two meetings daily, has publicly met the electors in every section of one of the very largest and least accessible ridings in anada, and has shown a head as well as an untiring energy for organization. He is young, but that is not a crime, not even a weakness in Kingston, where young men are nine tenths of the merchants and professional men. There is no reason why it should be a bar to parliamentary representation, especially when Mr. Shibley's ability is admittedly greater than that of his opponent. Then, the western part of the constituency has held the representation for a long term ; i also now holds the representation in the local legislature, clearly the eastern end is doubly entitled to the membership, and especialty so in a follower of Mr. Blake, now almost c∈rtain of victory.

MR. GUNN'S HOME-COMING.

Miss 'd Connection at Watertown-Crossing to Brockville-Sandy Spoken With.

The liberals worked up to the boiling point when the familiar voice of Mr. Gunn was heard over the telephone wires from Brock ville this afternoon. A half dozen men tried to get the candidate's ear at the same time. He said he was in good health, that he had had a fair passage, and that he was delighted to be so near home. He was pleased to hear of the enthusiasm of his supporters, and he particularly requested all citizens who could do so to give him their votes. He asked about lots of his friends, from the laborer to the merchant. With a cheery heart he comes back to the city in which he has spent half a century, and where he hopes to continue to live and exercise his usefulness.

The train bearing Alexander Gunn from New York to Kingston was so late that the express left Watertown for Cape Vincent without making connection. The people's candidate was, therefore, compelled to proceed to Morristown, cross to Brockville, and start for the city on the G.T.R. express. The welcome to be given him was, accordingly, postponed, the procession to take place at 3:30 o'clock. It is organizing as we go to press. An efficient band has been secured, and all arrangements made for a stirring time.

HE'S GETTING IT ALL ROUND.

Mr. Horsey Deals With an Anonymous Critic-A Pungent Letter,

KINGSTON, Feb. 16. - (To the Editor): I had hoped that the candor with which I had subscribed my name to my letter, in answer to that of "Student," would in fair play, have demanded that he should be sufficient. ly manly, and should have sufficient courage of his convictions, to subscribe his name to anything further he might have to say on this matter. As that courage and that manliness have not been displayed, as "Student" has taken advantage of his non-deplume to cowardly make a personal attack, I refuse to take further issue. My adversary, by his actions, has refused to grant what any gentleman has a right to expect of another, that an attack should be accompanied by the name of the one who makes it. There: fore, Mr. Editor, if you willallow mea little space, to make a few further explanations my part of the controversy will have ended.

In his last letter "Student" says "my want of forethought has entangled me in mire from which I have failed to extricate myself." Now I think that that expression is the very one I require to describe the rashness and utter folly of "Student" for his whole personal attack upon me is based upon the unwonted assumption that I was the author of the article in the Journal with which he finds fault. As to that I did not write that article, that I knew nothing of its having been inserted, and further that I do not know its author. My appeal was not in defence of the article in question, though I can see nothing wrong in it to a calm thinkowner by a lad named White. A very good screen this, indeed, to hide his own cowardice. It is an example of the old story of the robber running at full speed down the street crying. "Stop thief!" Why did I not utilize the editorial columns of the Journal? he asks. In the first place the editorial columns of our Journal are not open for political controversy, and again I did not write to the Jour nal because so far I have refrained from introducing politics into any of its columns, and I intend in the future to carry out the course I have pursued in the past. IT'S A SINGULAR DISEASE.

Mr Glenn, of Cape Vincent, Calls at the "Whig" Office-His is a Rare Case.

Yesterday the Whin office was visited by G. H. Glenn, of Cape Vincent, the gentle man who is suffering from Thomson's disease, an affection of the muscular system. the only case of the kind discovered in America, and the third in the world. Mr. Glenn is twenty-four years of age and a painter by trade. He is good-looking and of medium height. He wears glasses, be cause of the contraction of the cords of the eye, drawing the balls inward and making the Kingston loccmotive works find its need | him to see double without spectacles. He says he has been affected physically as long as he can remember At school he could play in none of the games, the sudden con traction of the muscles preventing him from running or doing any active exercise. Some people said he was only suffering from lazi ness, that he was "born tired," but the statements were untrue. He can work, and with expertness, but it takes him a few moments to get in action, as the muscles work very slowly. He made us feel how soft his flesh was and with a voluntary act he contracted the muscles until they became as hard as rocks. Yet he is weak, though not to such an extent as to interfere with his work. The disease becomes aggravated at intervals, notably so during stormy weather. His intellect is clear and sharp. He has a general stiffness of all the voluntary muscles, and these are particularly spasmodic when he rouses their action. When he closes his eyes some seconds elapse before he can re-open them. When he shuts his hand tight it takes 10 seconds before he can, by a concentrated effort, open it. He has frequently torn his clothing when putting it on or taking it off. At times he cannot go up stairs except a step at a time, and at another time he can rush up with great rapidity. His speech is not affected, though sometimes, while eating his tongue becomes inactive. He tried farming, and for a time improved; but the horses, while driving. pulling him along. He is in good health and has no pains or aches. For years he was doctored for rheumatism, and only on a visit to New York was his case properly diagnosed. There he created a sensation among the physicians, being visited by dozens of them. In the winter he says he is better than at any other period of the year. He is an only child and his parents are dead. His is, indeed, a rare case. He chatted pleasantly with our staff, and left us to visit the medical college, the students having expressed a desire to see him. As a painter he is very successful and can do his work with as much
