Decide When You Vote.

On Saturday seventy men at the M. T. company's shipyard were addressed by Capt. Theodore Allen and a division demanded the Tories to stand on one side, the grits on the other. Eilbeck, who denied under oath that he had informed Curtis of Meagher's attempt to defraud him, or that Meagher had invested in stocks in his establishment, was taken. The defence is now being tried. After the arguments of the counsel had been heard the judge found defendant guilty. FOR GUNN AND MOWAT.

A ROUSING LIBERAL MEETING ON SATURDAY NIGHT.

The Liberals' Address to Mr. Gunn—The Ladies Congratulating Ontario's Premier—Kingston's Son a Credit to The City—Never Any Dishonor Attached to Their Names.

Three quarters of the mammoth audience in the opera house on Saturday night remained until nearly midnight listening to the addresses and expressing approbation in cheers that could be heard blocks away. Conviction was carried with every sentence uttered, and the indications point to a victory for Gunn. Long before seven o'clock crowds gathered at the main entrance and when the doors were opened there was a rush, a scramble, and every seat in the building was soon afterwards occupied. The overflow piled upon the platform and crowded the aisles. By 7:30 o'clock standing room could not be secured. A sea of faces looked down upon the platform from the gallery, and from the dress circle, while hundreds looked up from the parquette. And the ladies, they crowded the boxes, filled many seats in the parquette, and even found accommodation by the dozen upon the platform. No political gathering was ever graced with such a company of women. The name of "Sandy" Gunn was on every tongue, a big-sized cannon on the platform reminding the audience most forcibly that the living piece of artillery was on hand and fully charged. The people's candidate stood in the hall-way greeting the citizens as they came. The welcome was spontaneous and proved, beyond contradiction, that he held a warm place in their affections. The students filled the balcony. They were in a merry mood, sang with vigor, cheered lustily, and cracked off many a joke.

ARRIVAL OF THE SPEAKERS.

It was about eight o'clock when Hon. Oliver Mowat arrived. The audience arose, and, with loud cheers, welcomed him as Ontario's premier and a Kingston boy. Then the students sang "For he's a jolly good fellow." Mr. R. C. Clute, of Belleville, was also tendered a good reception, but the greatest ovation of the evening was that given to Alexander Gunn when he stepped to the front of the stage. Such hat swinging, such handkerchief waving by the ladies, such cheers were never seen or heard in any gathering held in the city before. The enthusiasm of the hour was infectious, and manifested itself every few minutes. The platform was crowded, and amongst them (not nearly half) were: Messrs. C. F. Gildersleeve, W. R. McKee, Dr. Phelan, W. Hartly, J. McKelvey, W. Allen, F. Shaw, G. B. Macredie, W. A. Kenney, S. Harper, R. J. Eilbeck, A. Flett, J. L. Whiting, N. C. Polson, R. Crawford, B. M. Britton, T. Dawson, T. Drury, Prof. S. H. Clark, J. B. Carruthers, John Doyle, and dozens more, all solid substantial citizens.

AN ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

The president of the liberal association presented the following address of welcome to Mr. Gunn, the audience greeting the words with manifestations of delight:

"The reformers of the city of Kingston desire publicly to express to you the extreme pleasure with which they welcome you back to this good old limestone city. They thank you for the promptness with which you have responded to their unexpected call, and have journeyed over mountain, sea and plain to lead them, as of old, in the election conflict which is raging. In you they feel they have a candidate whose record is above reproach, whose interest in this city and its prosperity has been shown by the investment of your capital in its factories and in industries, and whose good will to its citizens has been repeatedly, yet not vainly, proved by aiding the poor and assisting the distressed. On two previous occasions you have led us to victory, and we feel confident that again on Feb. 22nd we shall have the pleasure of congratulating you, sir, and of congratulating ourselves upon the re-election of 'Sandy' Gunn as the member of parliament for the city of Kingston."

Mr. Gunn, in reply, thanked the liberals for the address and for the warm reception they had previously tendered him. The meeting on Thursday was eminently sufficient to repay him for all the exertions he had made in hastening back to Kingston. The call given him was accepted with cheerfulness, and he was proud to feel that they had again placed confidence in him. He would do all in his power to crown their efforts with victory. (Cheers.) Their opponents were active, but his friends were equal in their activity every time. (Cheers.) He was trying to see all the citizens, but he was afraid the time was too short to see as many as he desired, but he begged of the electors to excuse him if he failed to call upon them and to come forward and help to establish honest government in the land. If ever there was a time for Kingston to remain true to its interests, to its own candidate, and to honest government it was now. (Cheers.) He concluded by asking all those who would promise to aid him on Tuesday to stand up.

The mayor repeated the request, and the audience, with wild enthusiasm, answered the call, arose en masse, and cheered again and again.

WELCOME, HON. O. MOWAT.

Immediately afterwards the ladies of Kingston presented an address to Hon. O. Mowat. Mrs. R. M. Britton read it and it was followed by rousing applause. It read thus:

"We, the undersigned women of Kingston, desire to avail ourselves of the opportunity afforded by your first visit, to congratulate you on the overwhelming majority with which the province has endorsed your past administrations, and expressed its confidence in your continuing well and wisely to preside over its interests. We would also express our cordial hope that the same economic success and progress, in wise and just legislation, which has so happily characterized your administration in the past, will continue to mark it in the future. We would express, further, our hearty appreciation of the extension to our sex of the municipal franchise, the exercise of which we believe will be marked by beneficial results, and also of the legislative improvements embodied in the Crook's act, which, while in the opinion of many, leaving something to be still desired, is yet a great improvement on the former system. We would respectfully commend to your careful consideration the interests of our city and neighborhood, especially in the matter of scientific and educational development. In conclusion we cordially congratulate you on the practical proof, afforded by the history of Ontario during your term of office, that "Righteousness exalteth a nation," a commendation which we believe your administration in no small measure deserves."

The address was signed by the following ladies: Agnes M. Machar, C. E. Machar, Dora Allen, Mrs. W. R. McRae, Mrs. T. D. Robinson, Mrs. M. E. Britton, Mrs. Eliza J. Flint, Miss Inkster, Mrs. C. Anglin, Mrs. W. Robinson, Maggie A. McKee, Mrs. McAdam, Kate Hartly, Elizabeth Middle, Ellen P. McKay, M. Laidlaw, Mrs. J. Bormingham, Emma Mowat, H. Ethelwyn Mowat, Mrs. G. S. Fenwick, Isa Jack, Barbara Jack, Mrs. John Henderson, Jane Waddell, Letitia S. Moore, M. D. Moore, A. Holt, H. R. Leslie, Mrs. Peterson, Mrs. Vandewater, H. S. Muir, A. A. Rose, H. A. Leslie, Mrs. P. McLaren, J. McLaren, A. R. Anderson, Jessie Anderson, Mrs. Evan MacColl, H. Eilbeck, Mrs. James Yule, Mrs. A. Williamson, Mrs. J. S. Patch, Mrs. W. Tyner, Mrs. S. Robertson, Mrs. A. Moore, Mrs. N. Begg, Mrs. G. S. Oldrieve, Mrs. B. W. Robertson, Mrs. George Robertson, Mrs. N. McNeil, Mrs. James Pollic, L. M. Ross, Mrs. R. J. Carson, Mrs. W. Irving, Mollie Middleton, Mrs. Louise Middleton.

PROUD TO BE A KINGSTON BOY.

Hon. Oliver Mowat, in reply, thanked the ladies for their kind address. He appreciated much the kind words of congratulation they had offered to him. He esteemed it a high honor to receive the address, the first of the kind ever tendered to him, more particularly because it had come from the ladies of Kingston, from the daughters of the good old limestone city. (Cheers.) He never ceased to remember that he was a son of Kingston, (cheers), and as a Kingston boy he had ever endeavored, in all the positions of power to which the confidence of the people assigned him, to remember the place of his birth, and to bring honor upon it. He told of his interest in Kingston, of the pleasure he felt in recalling the history of the past, to visit the old landmarks, to chat about the old times, and while he rejoiced to see some things remaining, reminding him of the long ago, he rejoiced more at the great advancement it had made. The population was now three times as great as when he lived here; the wealth of the city had increased in greater proportion. There were better buildings, finer schools, grander houses, greater institutions, and, lastly, they had in Queen's university an institution they ought to be proud of. (Cheers.) There were many things in Kingston that gave him satisfaction, but nothing more so than its loyalty. If it should cease to be loyal there would be one tie less binding him to the good old city. (Cheers.) Loyalty and good government went hand in hand, however, and he was proud to say that in provincial matters these were ever prominent. If they were lacking in the dominion it was no fault of his. He had no influence with its government. He only wished he had. (Cheers.) He was proud to know that in provincial matters he had given satisfaction to his fellow-citizens. For fourteen years the people of Ontario had continued their confidence in him, (cheers), and only a few weeks ago they had given him a lease of power for four years more. (Cheers.) He ventured to say that in the future, as in the past, his government would endeavor to direct affairs in a way acceptable and agreeable to the people. He paid a compliment to his colleagues and his liberal supporters in parliament, claimed that he was simply carrying out their sentiments, and concluded by asserting that, with honest men in parliament, honest government would be carried out. He then proceeded to address the audience on political affairs, the report of which will be found in another column.

DOWN WITH CORRUPTION.

SHALL CANADA BE RULED PURELY AND HONESTLY?

Hon. O. Mowat Compares the Systems of Government—The Dominion House Provides Spoils For the Party at the Expense of the People—Local Speakers Create Enthusiasm—R. C. Clute on the Stump.

Hon. Oliver Mowat addressed the citizens of Kingston, assembled in the opera house on Saturday night, for upwards of an hour. While there was honest legislation and honest government in the provincial parliament it was wonderful he said that such could not be had in the dominion parliament. He spoke of Mr. Gunn as a man against whom no charges could be made, and no complaints uttered. He was a good honest business man, liberal, public-spirited, and charitable. The statesmanship of Edward Blake, and the superabundance of material in the party to form good cabinets were expressed and in a laughable way the animosity of Sir John Macdonald towards Mr. Mowat reviewed. It was caused, by the successful vindication of Ontario's rights, both territorial and constitutional. The Tories desire to defeat Ontario in order to make political capital in the other provinces, and to make use of Ontario's resources for the benefit of the chieftain's friends. Reference was made to the way the dominion treasury was plundered and to the deadening effect of moral sentiment, which he hoped, Kingston would aid in putting an end to. The waste of $500,000, in endeavoring to grab the issuance of liquor licenses, could have been put to many uses, said Mr. Mowat: "why even half of the amount could have been devoted to a school of practical science in Kingston (cheers), and your object attained without ever coming to me at all. (Cheers.) The school would have been more richly endowed than ever I could hope to make it, while a paralyzing blow would not have been struck of temperance and morality." Then the practice in regard to the preparation of the voters' list for the province and dominion was reviewed, the provincial lists being controlled by municipal councils and judges, the dominion lists by partisans of the government. (Cheers.) The way railway bonuses were granted by the provincial government was contrasted with the policy of the dominion government. The first gave grants to roads to complete them, with no margin for charter mongers and boodlers. Then the system of testimonials given to cabinet ministers was disclosed. As well might judges be bribed to give decisions to suitors as ministers to accept testimonials from those who desired favors from them. The close union between the liberals and wage earners in all cities was pointed out. The liberals had always been in sympathy with the masses; their desire was to make the greatest number happy. He concluded by urging the people, in this jubilee year of the Queen's the reign, to see that bad government ceased.

A LOGICAL ADDRESS.

R. C. Clute, of Belleville, made a lengthy address. It was convincing and logical. He proved conclusively that the debt had been enormously increased, that the expenditure had been enormously increased, that in the principles of statesmanship the conservative party was lacking, and that vast sums of money had gone into improper channels. The inhuman policy the Indians were subjected to, and the protests made against it by Principal Grant, the Presbyterians and other denominations, was referred to. The Riel question was discussed, and finally a review given of the troubles and grievances of the half-breeds leading up to the rebellion. He asked what condemnation was necessary under the circumstances. A voice exclaimed, "Fire them out!" and the audience screamed their approbation.

EX-ALD. R. J. EILBECK.

Ex-Ald. R. J. Eilbeck began an address about 11 o'clock and created great enthusiasm. He said the liberal Gunn was loaded with a charge that would make the conservatives sick. The procession on Thursday was but an introductory overture to the grand Waterloo that would follow on Tuesday. (Cheers.) He quoted a remark of Sir John's mouth organ, that the procession was made up of boys, and said that these very persons were claimed to have been given the franchise, and to insult them was a fair way to get their votes. Some young Tories in the gallery tried to be funny and hissed, and Eilbeck quieted them. He pointed out that liberals were liberal, that a plank of their platform was to extend to others the same rights that they demanded. It was only snakes and geese that hissed. The speaker discussed the filling of civil service offices with English dukes, and created great enthusiasm as he described the way the Canadian boys were treated and the way they were driven from home, and all because of the policy of the government in pitching dandies and flunkies into the high places they should have. "Who was it that sprang to arms and gallantly suppressed the rebellion? The men who wore second hand suits and eye-glasses? No. Oh no! They must stay at home and smoke cigarettes and chat about toboggan slides while the country people, you know, must do the fighting." Someone shouted "Soup-kitchen," and the speaker said that Rev. W. B. Carey, a supporter of Sir John, knew all about it. He wanted a public soup kitchen established in 1885, and only last Tuesday Sir John, the great mogul, presided over one in the bowling alley. (Cheers and laughter.) Then he chatted about Sir John's wheeled residence (Jamaica car) and about his lack of interest in Kingston. He had no vote and no more interest here than a native of Timbuctoo. Sir John's coach house was owned by the C.P.R. company, and the same company owned Sir John. "Why," he exclaimed, "the government is the C.P.R., and John A. is the tail end of it." The audience broke into uproarious laughter. Mr. Eilbeck concluded by discussing the piratical act of Sir John in fastening himself upon Kingston when he had a safe seat in Carleton, and urged the workmen to support their friend Sandy Gunn, to stand by the man who aided them, and to vote for honesty in place of dishonesty, for economy in place of boodlism, for Mr. Gunn and against the king of corruptionists. The address was greeted with great applause.

THE FINAL APPEAL.

B. M. Britton made a vigorous appeal for Mr. Gunn. He denounced the dishonesty and corruption of Sir John and his followers; spoke of the way in which Sir John had lured Mr. Gunn, and his deceit in opposing one so honorable. He asked all conservatives, in view of the disgraceful revelations made in regard to the followers of Sir John, to stand aloof and condemn the hypocrisy and corruption, so rampant, by voting for honest Sandy Gunn. They should support a Kingstonian, and see to it that the seat was assured to a man who had all his interests here. John McKelvey asked if Kingstonians were willing to submit to an outsider representing them. Were they going to allow Kingston to be the only city in Canada that had not as its member, one of its own citizens? Every elector should meditate on this question. He moved a vote of thanks to the speakers.

Mr. W. Hartly seconded it, and castigated the Tories who had attempted to disgrace the meeting by their unseemly conduct. He did not accuse the conservative party of a lack of good breeding, but it was always noticed that at liberal meetings Kingstonians were made ashamed of themselves by the disreputable conduct of a few contemptible Tories. He spoke of the reception given to Mr. Gunn, said it was one an emperor might have been proud of, and exposed the snobishness of the Tories, which, forsooth, because the laborers were not decked out in fine coats and kid gloves, had to disgrace itself by describing them as a "motley crowd." He asked the workmen, of either side of politics, if they would endorse a paper or party that so characterized them? Mr. Gunn was proud to meet the citizens, and never more so than when he found the toilers, with begrimed faces, and hands, ready and delighted to extend their warm congratulations upon his return. He alluded to the manner in which the Liberals had put their money in local industries, compared the non-interest of Sir John, ancient local industries, with the $100,000 of Sandy Gunn. He asked the people to support the man who put his hand in his pocket for every thing that raised and elevated and helped the industrial classes. He wanted a big rally on Tuesday, a big rush, and a final triumph for Sandy Gunn and honest government. The audience was filled with delight, and at 11:40 o'clock cheered as no audience had ever cheered before.

After Mowat and Clute had been cheered and the green had been honoured Mr. Hartly advanced, cap in hand, and exclaimed, "Boys, I have led you on the eve of many a battle; let me do so again. Let us have such a cheer that it can be heard for blocks around." And Mr. Hartly led the way with a hip! hip! hurrah! and the audience responded with six deep lung and roof-raising cheers. They meant victory for Gunn and honest government.
