ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

An Enquiry Answered—School Money Expended—The Provincial Finances.

TORONTO, March 9.—Mr. Miller, member for Addington, desired to know the cause of delay in appointing a registrar for Lennox and Addington. The premier replied that the delay was occasioned by the large number of qualified applicants for the vacancy.

Mr. Wood, North Hastings, asked for a statement of the expenditure from the Poor school fund for 1885 and 1886, where expended, the length of time such schools were kept open, and the amount received from local sources.

Hon. T. B. Pardee read letters from officers of the crown lands department showing that returns desired by Mr. Meredith, for a statement of timber licenses granted since 1871, and a plan showing all timber limits under license, would involve years in preparation and cost many thousands of dollars. He suggested that the leader of the opposition should take counsel with the officers of the department with the object of securing such information as he required at less cost of labour and money. Mr. Meredith agreed to do so.

The public accounts were laid on the table yesterday. The treasurer will probably make his financial statement on Thursday. The estimated expenditure for the year was $3,029,216.91. The expenditure was $2,769,978.82.

OUR QUERY CORNER.

Where Does the Century Begin?

The explanations in the WHIG of the 5th are correct, but to still further enlighten your readers, would you please say where does it begin?

We scarcely understand the question. State it a little clearer.

2. Who wrote the first novel?

3. Who wrote "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb"?

1. Lord Bacon.

2. The earliest prose fiction of which we have any knowledge are the "Milesian Tales," supposed to have been written by Aristides.

3. Lawrence Sterne.

Is Anything at Stake?

1. When were knee breeches discarded for the present form of dress?

2. Was a battle fought on German soil during the Franco-German war? If so, what battle?

H. H. W.

1. About the commencement of the present century.

REPORT OF THE CHARITIES.

The Skinner Wing of the House of Industry—The Financial Statement.

The inspector of charities, in speaking of the Skinner wing at the house of industry, says: "The addition is substantially built, and is in most respects a credit to the designers and the board of management. It has been built by funds left by a testator, who evidently had discovered the wants of the institution."

The cost of maintaining the 124 patients in the house of providence for 1886 was $5,944.19. The receipts were $5,832.35. The government allowance for 1887 is $1,742.23.

The revenue of the orphans' home during the year was $2,906.79, including the government grant of $449.10, and the expenditure was $3,104.63. The collective stay of the children was 17,544 days, entitling the institution to receive a sum of $351.08 as government aid for 1887.

The income of L'Hotel Dieu orphanage was $967, and the expenditure $1,196.40. The number cared for was 209.

ARCHBISHOP CROKE'S CASE.

He Explains to the Pope His Attitude on the Irish Questions.

DUBLIN, March 8.—Archbishop Croke has written to the pope in explanation of his attitude on the rent question. He says he has proposed nothing, nor has he made any recommendation relative to taxes. He has simply expressed an opinion concerning the relative value of the no tax manifesto and no rent manifesto. He states that it never entered his head to recommend the general uprising against the payment of taxes. He would trust alone to the constitutional agitation for a restoration of the national rights in Ireland. Under the existing conditions only a knave or a fool, he declares, would trust otherwise. It is believed that the action of Archbishop Croke, in offering this explanation, is the result of pressure from the pope.

The People Protest.

DUBLIN, March 7.—The Dublin municipal council has adopted a resolution to appeal to the free people of the world to prevent the British government from carrying out their "threats of outrage against the Irish people." Lord Mayor Sullivan and others spoke, and violently denounced the government.

GREAT PREACHER DEAD

REV. MR. BEECHER HAS PASSED PAINLESSLY AWAY.

Another Night of Anxiety—The Touching Prayer of Mrs. Beecher Answered—A Bereaved Congregation in Tears—The End Has Come.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The meeting of the parishioners of Plymouth church was held in the lecture room, commencing at 8 p.m. last night. The room was crowded with male and female members of the congregation and not a few friends from other churches, and there was scarcely a dry eye to be seen during the proceedings. Mr. Tilney presided. Rev. Dr. Halliday opened the meeting with a prayer, in which he desired that their beloved pastor might not even be allowed to seem to suffer, but that he might speedily attain unto the rest prepared for him. After the singing of a hymn other prayers were offered and feeling addresses were made, in which the past associations of those present with the dying pastor were referred to with quivering lips. The following letter from Mrs. Beecher was read:

"To the beloved members of Plymouth church: 'I can not speak my thanks to each one of you for the sympathy and the love, and the devotion manifested in the last dark sad days for your pastor. He can no longer speak to you for himself. Then permit me to do it for him, for myself, for my family. Each word of love from the people so dear to your pastor's heart has been a comfort and balm to my heart wrung almost to bursting. How he loved his church, you will only learn in its fullness when you stand with him in heaven. To each and every one of you I send my thanks and most earnest blessing. Pray for his wife and children, soon to lose the truest companion, the tenderest father. And if we must relinquish all possible hope of his full recovery, oh! beloved, pray that his departure may be speedy, that we may not long be agonized by this struggle between life and death. Pray if he must leave us that before another day dawns he may receive his crown and be forever with his Lord.—EUNICE N. BEECHER.

The meeting closed with the benediction pronounced by Mr. Halliday.

The Death This Morning.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher died in the presence of his family. Those present at the bedside were: Col. H. B. Beecher, his wife, his daughters, Hattie and Daisy, and his son, Henry Ward Beecher; Miss Edith Beecher, W. C. Beecher and wife, Rev. Samuel Scoville, Mrs. S. Scoville (eldest daughter of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher); Miss Scoville, who has just come from the Pacific slope; Miss Bullard; Rev. S. B. Halliday and wife; Deacon S. V. White, E. A. Scoble, one of the trustees of Plymouth church; and Major S. R. Pond.

Dr. Searle noticed the change in the patient's condition at 3:30 a.m., and summoned all in the house to the bedside, momentarily expecting his death, but he lingered on much longer than had been anticipated. He passed away gradually and almost imperceptibly, drawing his last breath without apparent suffering or return to consciousness in any degree. Mrs. Beecher bore up wonderfully and with marvelous courage. No cry was heard from the door. Mr. Beecher having always objected to the use of this and the gloom associated with it in the presence of death; instead a wreath of flowers hung from the left side of the doorway, at the top of the stoop, composed of white and red roses, and lilies of the valley, and tied up with satin.

NEW YORK, March 8.—As the end approached the family could be heard weeping and sobbing. Dr. Searle stood by the bedside holding one of Mr. Beecher's hands, and at 9:30 o'clock he said: "Mr. Beecher is no more. He is dead." It is difficult to describe the scene at this moment, not withstanding the fact that his death was looked for, that it had been expected hourly. It seemed to come with such crushing force that the family were perfectly prostrated with grief. Mrs. Beecher, who had held up so bravely from the first, was utterly broken down, and when supported by her son Harry, as she tottered from room, looked as if it would not be long before she would follow her beloved husband.

The news of Mr. Beecher's death spread very quickly to all parts of the city and Brooklyn. It may now be said to be a city of mourning. Even those who did not always concur with Mr. Beecher in his views had no hesitation in expressing their deep regret at his death. As a mark of respect to his memory the flags on all public buildings were placed at half-mast, and Mayor Whitney had the city hall bell tolled for half an hour.

The committee, appointed by the officers of Plymouth church to take charge of the funeral, made the necessary arrangements this morning.

Many years ago John F. Howard gave Mr. Beecher a portion of his plot in Greenwood cemetery, and the members of Mr. Beecher's family, who have died, have been buried there, but the committee will probably now select another plot.

Nearly 100 telegrams of condolence poured in to the household within an hour after death. President Cleveland and Governor Hill were among the first to send such messages.

At 10:30 o'clock it was given out that the funeral would take place in Greenwood on Thursday next.

Mr. Quincy Wood, well known sculptor, who is to do the work will call at the house in the course of a day for the purpose of making a plaster cast of Mr. Beecher's features. It is not intended that any examination shall be made of Mr. Beecher's brain organism.

A Brief Biography.

Henry Ward Beecher, one of the most famous divines in America, was born at Litchfield, Connecticut, on June 24th, 1813, and was, consequently, nearly 74 years of age. He studied in the public Latin schools at Boston, graduated at Amherst college, Mass., 1834, and studied theology under his father, Rev. Lyman Beecher, at the Lane seminary, near Cincinnati, Ohio. He first settled as a Presbyterian minister at Laurensburg, Va., 1837, removed in 1839 to Indianapolis, and became pastor of the Plymouth Congregational church at Brooklyn, New York, in 1847, and had continued to be pastor of that church up to the present time.

That church edifice has seating capacity for nearly 3,000 persons, and the church membership is over 2,000. During his whole career he mingled to a greater extent than almost any other preacher and pastor of his denomination in matters not directly professional. For nearly a year, during his theological course, he edited the Cincinnati Journal, a religious weekly. In Indianapolis he was editor of the Farmer and Gardener. In Brooklyn he was soon known as an earnest opponent of slavery, and an advocate of temperance, peace, and other reforms, and very early became prominent as a platform orator and lecturer. He was a strong republican until 1883, when, after Mr. Blaine's nomination for the presidency by the Chicago convention, he joined, if indeed he did not inaugurate, the "Mugwump" movement, which helped so much in electing Mr. Cleveland. He was always a whole-souled politician, and delivered many political sermons in Plymouth church, which were widely quoted by the party to which he belonged. In 1878 he caused a considerable sensation by preaching his celebrated "bread and water for the workman" sermon. He delivered several series of lectures, visiting Montreal on each tour, the last occasion being in the early part of last year, when he addressed two very large audiences in the Queen's hall. He twice visited Europe, and in 1862 addressed large audiences in the principal cities of Great Britain on the civil war then raging in the United States. In the summer of 1874 Mr. Theodore Tilton, formerly his associate, and afterwards his successor in the editorship of the New York Independent, charged him with criminality with Mrs. Tilton. The committee appointed by the Plymouth congregation reported that this charge was without any foundation; but meanwhile Mr. Tilton commenced a civil suit against Mr. Beecher, laying his damages at $100,000. The trial was protracted for more than six months and attracted widespread attention; at its close the jury, after being locked up for more than a week, failed to agree upon a verdict, nine being for Mr. Beecher's acquittal and three for his conviction. In 1878 Mr. Beecher announced that he did not believe in the eternity of punishment, believing that all punishments are cautionary and remedial, and that no greater cruelty could be imagined than the continuance of suffering eternally after all hope of reformation is gone. He was understood to hold both to the annihilation of the miserable and the restoration of all others. In 1882 he formally withdrew from the association of Congregational churches on account of this change of belief. From the date of the establishment of the Independent he was a constant contributor to its columns, and from 1861 to 1863 was its chief editor. In 1870 he became editor-in-chief of the Christian Union, a position which he held for about ten years. In 1871 Henry W. Sage, one of his parishioners, founded a lectureship of preaching, known as the Lyman Beecher Lectureship, in Yale college divinity school, and the first three annual courses were delivered by Mr. Beecher. The pastor of Plymouth has been a busy worker in the field of literature, and was the author of many books on religious and social topics.

Plymouth Church's Plainness.

Plymouth church, a homely but capacious structure, was built in 1849, the first service being held in January, 1850. It has little appearance of a church, being designed only as an auditorium, with Mr. Beecher's desk as the central point and capacious galleries around the walls. Back of the pulpit is a gallery in which is an immense organ, one of the finest in the country. It cost $27,000, and contains 3,442 pipes and four banks of keys. The music of this powerful instrument has contributed much to the success of the Plymouth church meetings. There are 2,500 sittings in the church, from which an income of $65,000 has been derived. The pastor's salary has been for some time fixed at $25,000. In this building two notable occasions were celebrated, being Beecher's twenty-fifth anniversary as pastor and his seventieth birthday, both of which were celebrated with that zeal which has always characterized the congregation's love for its pastor.

Elevated Railway Accident.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The establishment of Nicol, the tailor, on the Bowery, was badly burned this morning. The fire caused a blockade of trains on the Third avenue elevated railroad. It is said that the conductor of the train, which had come to a standstill near one of the stations, told the passengers they could get out and walk along the track to the depot. A number of them made the attempt, but they fell to the street, and several of them were killed.

The distance which the men fell was about 20 feet. The killed were Patrick Matthew and two unknown men.
