CITY FOR THE CITIZENS.

HOW KINGSTON CAN BE RENDER-ED MORE ATTRACTIVE.

Nature Has Done a Great Deal for the City and the People Can do a Great Deal More for it-The President of the Polywog Club on the Results of His Travels. After an absence of nearly twelve months the president of that ancient and aristocratic institution, the "Pollywog Club," has returned to the city. His coming was known to the secretary and other members, and the club room was newly painted, frescoed, and almost entirely refurnished. Mottoes. were placed over the chair, "Canada for Canadians," and "Kingston for Kingstonians." On Saturday night the club met to greet their long absent president; and such a meeting! Every available chair was occupied. Standing room was at a premium. About 8:30 the president arrived, cheer upon cheer greeting him as he took his seat. He addressed the members as follows:

"My heart is filled with pleasure and pain. I am pleased to meet my warmhearted friends again, but pained to know that Kingston has done herself discredit. Why, gentlemen, the very mottoes I read over my head, "Canada for Canadians" and "Kingston for Kingstonians," seem to mock us. Since I last saw you, nearly a year ago, I have travelled many many miles, visiting the principal cities in the United States I met Canadians, some in good positions, and others not doing so well. But all had the one reply to my enquiry, "What drove Z. Prevost is giving the choice of any | you into this strange city?" It was, "Hard To-day there are thousands of Canadians, employed and seeking employment, in the United States. All of them were driven from this country by want of work, although our territory is as large as the United States, our climate and resources just as good. Why are our honest, energetic, enabused by those in power and by Kingstonians. Nature made Kingston one of the loveliest places in America. This is saying a great deal. But, gentlemen, I've travelled America over, and know whereof I speak. Kingston and her surroundings cannot be military college, passed away. Her sick equalled by any place in America. Nature has done everything for her, but her people have done nothing. The beautiful St. Lawrence, with her Thousand Islands, clear cool water, and splendid tishing, on one hand; the Rideau, its grand scenery, gorgeous chain of lakes, dotted with magnificent little islands, crystal water, and fine fish, on the other hand. No such lakes, no such islands, and no such fishing can be found anywhere as about Loughboro lake, for instance. And yet few of our citizens have any idea of its grandeur. And there's Sharbot lake, and hundreds of other lakes along the line of the K. & P. R., as yet almost unknown. The beautiful drives around the city and suburbs are unsurpassed. All these nature has given us, while the citizens stubbornly refuse to assist nature by adding artificial adornment. Turn to, every man of you, and give a helping hand, and in less than a decade Kingston will be the most attractive place and the greatest summer resort in America. By the way I think it's as bad for the man who pretends to be a christian and a temperance advocate to swallow his principles as it is for a poor man to accept a bribe. THE LATEST FRO 1 AFRICA.

The Russian Explorer Who Recently Had an Interview With H. M. Stanley.

DR. WILLIAM JUNKER.

Henry M. Stanley's expedition is due to the letters received from Emin Pasha, and forwarded by Dr. William Junker, who was formerly his travelling companion. Additional to these there were received from Dr. Junker, then at Zanzibar, dispatches which showed how imminent was the peril to which Emin Pasha was exposed, surrounded by warlike enemies in equatorial Africa. When Stanley reached Cairo on his present mission of relief he met Junker for the first time. Writing Jan. 29th, he gives a pen picture of the eminent Russian explorer. "Dr. Junker," he says, "is a short man, now inclined to embonpoint, though he has not yet regained his full measure of strength. He wears a full beard, and the general cast of his face is strongly marked. He has a plentiful crop of hair, worn thick and long, and brushed backward. He is amiable, frank, modest. To every question he answers without reserve. He is so free, in fact, that without my asking he is about presenting me with a map of his travels, seven feet long. I can see that he has a method of his own, which, added to his peculiar patience, love of exactitude, has enabled him to present in a sensible shape the topography of the country. It is a remarkable survey by compass, every tiny hill and every tiny stream is down, and under all I see the sturdy form of the patient, honest man doing his best with all the faculties nature gave him and education ripened for him. Looking up from his wonderful map and seeing him before me, I recognized that Russia had also given us a true and loyal hearted African explorer. He promises to tell the Royal and Scottish Geographical societies some day what he can, and though his English is not of the best, and his appearance unimposing. I venture to my that when English geographers see his map they will forget his bad English and all else, and only see honest Junker trudging patiently with his tiny caravan, making music with his accordion to the wondering tribes of the Welle Makwa Valley, and collating valuable facts for civilized mankind. They must admire the man's modesty. Russia will be justified in making much of this quaint hero, and indeed any country might well be. Take my word you will like him." To this beautiful tribute a few biographical facts may be added. Dr. William Junker comes of Russo German parentage, and was born in Moscow in 1840. He was educated at St. Petersburg and Gottingen, and studied medicine in the latter place, as well as at Berlin and Prague. Dr. Junker began his African travels about ten years ago, exploring portions of Tunis and Upper Egypt. Six years ago he went into the heart of Africa, at his own expense, to complete the exploration of the country lying in the basins of Bahrel, Ghazal and Welle-Makwa rivers. From the depths of that mysterious region he has but recently emerged, and his account of the results of his geographical, botanical and ethnological studies in that new field will, when published, be one of the most interesting contributions of late years to our knowledge of the dark continent.

The company holds that the by-law gave the city the representation on the directorate during construction, and during the spending of the city's bonus. There is now no construction, and the argument is that there is no longer a necessity for municipal representation. The aldermen have a different opinion, and they are influenced it is understood by the city solicitor's opinion.

A communication was read from Thomas Mills, secretary of the Cataraqui bridge company, calling the attention of the council to the proposed extension of the K. & P. R. dock, north of the Cataraqui bridge, as the extension, if carried out, would serious. ly impair navigation and be detrimental to the interests of the city. The city solicitor, in a communication, reported that the K. & P. R. company had intimated that they would not go beyond the harbor line, as suggested by a city committee. A letter was afterwards sent to the company stating that there was no harber limit, and that the company would proceed with the work at | Paragraphs of Interest as Picked Up by their peril. SEEKING INFORMATION.

Ald. Thompson asked what progress had been made towards the arbitration as to the value of the water works. The mayor said that Judge Price had intimated to him that he would submit the name of a third arbitrator to morrow. He was asked to defer action until after the elections.

Ald. Thompson asked if the city would have any interest or control in the new fair grounds. It would be desirable that buildings of a substantial character should be erected so that property in the vicinity would be enhanced. He hoped the mayor would interview the gentlemen interested and ascertain the kind of buildings to be put up. Ald. McIntyre did not know that any dersons in Rideau ward had made complaints. Ald. Thompson said that three persons on York street had mentioned the mat ter to him. They were not desirous of having the same class of buildings put up on the new grounds as now exist on the crystal palace grounds. Ald. Wilson thought the matter should be looked into at once. The matter then dropped.

THE K. AND P.R. DIRECTORATE.

Ald. Harty brought up the matter of representation on the board of the K. & P. RR. directorate. He said that last year he had been appointed as the city's representative, meetings he was led to believe that either the board had not met or else the action of director on the board.
