OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS
As there are many inferior goods, corded with late, hemp, etc., offered and sold as Corline by some unprincipled merchants trading on the reputation of our genuine Corline, we will warn the ladies against such imposition by drawing their attention to the necessity of seeing that the name train, and when he hears the whistle in the distance he is thrilled with excitement, and he waits until all the passengers have come out, and then he waits until the train has gone clear out of sight again, and then he goes home, hastening back to the next train, and he will be at every train until that son comes back, unless the son waits until the father be dead. But oh, the greater patience of God! He has been waiting for you, not seven years, not nine years, but for some of you, twenty years, thirty years, forty years, fifty years—waiting, calling—waiting, calling until nothing but omnipotent patience could have endured it. Oh, my brother, do not take the sentiment of my text as your sentiment. We do care for your soul. One Sabbath night, years ago, in my church in Brooklyn, a young man appeared at the end of the platform and he said to me: "I have just come off the sea." I said: "When did you arrive?" Said he: "I came into port this afternoon. I was in a great 'blow' off Cape Hatteras this last week, and I thought that I might as well go to heaven as to hell. I thought the ship would sink; but, sir, I never very seriously thought about my soul until to-night." I said to him: "Do you feel that Christ is able and willing to save you?" "Oh, yes," he replied, "I do." "Well," I said, "now are you willing to come and be saved by Him?" "I am," he said. "Well, will you now, in the prayer we are about to offer, give yourself to God for time and eternity?" "I will," he said. Then we knelt in prayer, and after we had got through praying, he told me that the great transformation had taken place. I could not doubt it. He is on the sea now. I do not know what other port he may gain or lose, but I think he will gain the harbor of heaven.

Star of peace, beam o'er the billow,
Bless the soul that sighs for Thee;
Bless the sailor's lonely pillow,
Far, far at sea.

It was sudden conversion with him that night. Oh, that it might be sudden conversion with you to-day! God can save you in one moment as well as he can in a century. There are sudden deaths, sudden calamities, sudden losses. Why not sudden deliverances? God's spirit is infinite in speed. He comes here with omnipotent power, and he is ready here and now, instantaneously and forever, to save your soul. I believe that a multitude of you will to-day come to God. I feel you are coming, and you will bring along your families and your friends with you. They have heard in heaven already of the step you are about to take. The news has been cried along the golden streets and has rung out from the towers, "A soul saved! A soul saved!" But there is some one here to-day who will reject this gospel. He will stay out of the kingdom of God himself. He will keep his family and his friends out. It is a dreadful thing for a man just to plant himself in the way of life, then keep back his children, keep back his companion in life, keep back his business partners—refuse to go into heaven himself and refuse to let others go in.

A young man, at the close of a religious service, was asked to decide the matter of his soul's salvation. He said: "I will not do it to-night." Well, the Christian man kept talking with him, and he said: "I insist that to-night you either take God or reject Him." "Well," said the young man, "if you put it that way, I will reject Him. There, now, the matter's settled." On his way home on horseback he knew not that a tree had fallen across the road, and he was going at full speed, and he struck the obstacle and dropped lifeless. That night his Christian mother heard the riderless horse plunging about the barn, and, mistrusting something terrible was the matter, she went out and came to the place where her son lay, and she cried out: "Oh, Henry! dead and not a Christian. Oh, my son! my son! dead and not a Christian. Oh, Henry! Henry! dead and not a Christian." God keep us from such a catastrophe.

Go at Once to the Root
Of the evil; doing by halves makes waste half the energy expended by mankind. Why should you trifle with disease? When indications are given that something has gone wrong make the restoration of normal conditions the real, not incidental, business of life. Few curative agents have equalled Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butter-nut, compounded of purely vegetable substances, on scientific principles and beautifully sugar-coated. They constitute the most certain, safe, and pleasant family medicine in existence. Try Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butter-nut. Sold by N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, and by all dealers in medicine.

M. CHARLES FLOQUET,
President of the French House of Commons.

Twenty years ago M. Charles Floquet, president of the French chamber of deputies, was a young advocate, quite obscure, but anxious to find an opportunity to try his mental strength and make himself known. He belonged to a generation exuberant and strong, liberal and democratic. They revolutionized politics as the romantics of 1830 revolutionized literature. They wore the vesture of Robespierre, but they took care beforehand to remove the buttons. That was twenty years ago. Instead of the irreverent kerchief which he raised before the czar, the republic has given to Floquet the hat of president, which hovers, mysterious and solemn, above the fields of parliamentary battles. To-day he holds the wand which all parties respect, and whose appearance can quiet the most spirited wrangle and the loudest tumult. But during his two years in the chair M. Floquet has not once had occasion to use his supreme prerogative.

He has all the gifts and graces men envy. It is a sight to see him enter the council. He walks down the long salon with a majestic stride, irreproachably attired, his head erect, his face composed, saluting with a graceful inclination of the head the soldiers, while the drums beat in his honor, and behind him come, smiling with boyish pleasure, a company of faithful secretaries. If he had not been re-elected president of the chamber there would have been great regret among the wise as well as the beautiful. Not to see above the parliamentary tribune that calm, fine, solemn face would be a disappointment to every one who can appreciate the majesty and dignity of President Floquet.

SPORTING GOSSIP.

Talk About Fast Horses—A Story of Hyer.
[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, March 18.
The talk about a race between J. D. Morrissey's Montana Regent and E. J. ("Lark") Bakwin's Volante for $10,000 a side continues unabated, although the parties to the controversy are no nearer an understanding now than when the proposition was first made. Mr. Bakwin wishes the race to occur after the Latonia meeting, while Mr. Morrissey desires it to take place at the meeting of the new Memphis Jockey club, which begins April 23. Or, he says, he will match his horse against Volante for $25,000, to carry weight for age; race to be run at Chicago during the meeting there. And thus the matter stands at present. As Bakwin does not seem to be disposed to make any concessions, this is likely to be the last of it.

Tom Hyer, the first pugilistic champion of America, has been credited with having been what is generally known as a stingy man. That such was not the case, the following anecdote of the dead gladiator, which was related to me yesterday by an old friend of his, will amply prove. Hyer, after his battle with "Yankee" Sullivan, was in a saloon, with a party of kindred spirits, at a very late hour one night. In the midst of their uproarious talk and laughter, a girl apparently about 16 years of age, poorly clad, and shivering from the cold—it was winter at the time—entered the place, and, approaching the roustabouts, timidly asked for a small sum of money to procure some medicine for her mother, who she said was lying very ill at home. The bartender gruffly commanded her to leave. She turned to obey the order, when one of the party made some insinuation as to her probable means of obtaining a livelihood. This was more than Hyer could stand. He beckoned to the girl, who returned. Placing $5 in her hand he bade her go home and never again enter a place where she would possibly be subjected to insult. The girl tearfully thanked the bravely pugilist and left the place. Then, turning upon her persecutors, Hyer said in a tone of ineffable scorn: "That girl's story may or may not have been true, but I do not feel that I could afford, for the sake of a little money, to have her pinched face appearing to me every time I might try to catch a nap. Anyway, the insult you fellows put upon her was worth the $5 I gave her."

Hyer was, like most other pugilists, extremely superstitious, and it is said that he would never enter into any enterprise without first transferring a ring which he wore upon the little finger of his left hand to the corresponding digit of his right.

Judging from the manner in which the Detroiters are pounding the ball at Macon, where they are at present engaged in active practice, they will furnish plenty of exercise for the outfield of the other league teams. They seem to exactly "cotton" to the new rules restricting the pitcher's method of delivery. But there is scarcely any rule which prevents everything which it is intended to, and this is the case with the pitchers. Twitchell is said to have practiced indefatigably a motion to throw the ball to first while in reality sending it spinning over the home plate. He has attained considerable proficiency at it, and will doubtless succeed in greatly puzzling both batsmen and base runners during the coming season. By the way, Twitchell is a pitcher of whom I expect great things before many years have passed.

High Priced and Rare.
Among American stamps those issued by the postmaster at Brattleboro, Vt., in 1846, are very rare, and readily bring $100 in this city. If attached to the original envelope the fortunate possessor can get $250 for one of them. There are less than a score of them in existence. A Baltimore stamp of 1846 recently turned up in this city and was sent to Europe, where it was sold for $400. The most valuable stamps are usually sent to Europe, because better prices are got there. There are not more than three of the famous Alexandria, Va., 5 cent black stamps (on a buff envelope) in existence, and these are valued at $250 apiece. There is a Goliad, Tex., stamp worth $95; a Baton Rouge worth $50; St. Louis, $55; and several others valued at $30 each.—New York Sun.
