DISCOURSES ON THE SEWER GASES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

And Tells of an Interview with a Wild Eyed Man Who Proposes to Turn Them Into an Illuminant-Something About the Cable Car Inventor.

[Special Correspondence.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16. for things of practical use issued to California than to any other part of the world with ten times the population? Well, it is a notable fact. The Californians are not nearly all engaged in either mining or stock gambling, as so many are ready to believe. The Californian is first of all a thinker—an observer of men and of things.

Press. But as I was going on to say, this ex- Celestials. For be it known that a Chinaplosion was really terrific, and made the man's nickel counts about as much, even to the cobblestones fly pretty lively up and down the steep street, and made quite a little talk about town. And, to admit an ugly truth, they are becoming a little too frequent for comfort, too. Some say it is because of the filthy condition of the streets and sewers. I do not know whether this is the cause or not, but I remember that something of this kind occurred near the New York hotel, on Broadway, when I was living in New York city, and some of the wooden blocks of the pavement were transferred from the street to the housetops in very short order. All doctors tell us that death lurks up and down these sewers, and that there is a power for evil in any sewer "more terrible than an army with ban-

Certainly we know from the explosions that there is a force and hidden power down there that must be chained up; else some of our growing young cities will not live to any great age. But be all these things as they may, I must tell you of a wild eyed man who caught me by the shoulder on Clay street one morning as I was passing down town.

"I have it!" cried the wild eyed man, as he held me tight and dug his long, bony fingers into my shoulder. "I have it! I have it!" "Evidently you have something," I said, as caught the wild, nervous, glittering eye and tried to stand him off. "Ah, you do not believe me. You are like the rest. You mean jimjams, snakes, horn toads and bugs in my boots! No, sir! no, sir! I mean that I have chained the roaring lion. I have discovered it! I am the new

"But, my friend, what have you discovered! And where have you chained your roaring lion?"

Columbus!"

"Here!" and he stamped hard on the pavement. "There is a roaring lion running up and down every dirty sewer in every dirty city; disease, death, dynamite, is in every square foot—a power for evil that is only heard through these explosions. Ah, you think me crazy. Listen to me. I have been working on this thing for years. At last 1 have it. I am now the master of a secret by which I can chain the roaring lion in every' sewer. In other words, I am going to convert this sewer gas into light, into life, into heat! I am going to light San Francisco with the gas of her own sewers! I am going to heat this city with her own explosives! I am going to convert an agent of disease and death into a thing of beauty and of life! You shall read your poems by the light of the sewer gas that is under your feet! You shall warm your body, cook your breakfast from the same source!"

This, in brief, is the substance of the wild eyed discoverer's speech and action. He made no request of secresy. In fact, I doubt if he knew me at all. I certainly did not know him. And from the look of his worn and wild face he will probably be fished up out of the bay before the week is over and borne to the morgue and buried with the great army of the unknown that has gathered its innumerable soldiers on these far seashores of adventure.

There may be nothing at all in what the poor man said, but there is certainly a power for destruction down in our sewers. And now where is the man that will or can convert this power for evil into a power for good! leave the suggestion to the thinkers of the world; merely mentioning in conclusion that the thing seems far more reasonable and feasthe than did many another discovery and derprise that is now a source of immense overnue, as well as blessing to the community. at the outset.

Having disposed of this theory and this theorist, I now beg to call your attention to the theory of a California Columbus which really did materialize.

The name of A. S. Hallidie is new I suppose to nearly the entire world. He is a modest, quiet man, of Scotch stock, I think, Francisco. And yet, unknown as is his name, being purifying and strengthening and Hailidie-then a young man, and not at all without position or future, as so many of our great inventors and discoverers have been, and are still-then and there resolved to devote his life to the amelioration of this pitiful condition of affairs in our streets.

He did not appeal to or at all interfere with the bullies who lorded it over the faithful dumb brutes, but went quietly and determinedly to work to under nine and dethrone them. Steadily, patiently, night and day, he kept on with his experiments, asking no favors of any one, keeping his own counsel, making his silent voyages on the unknown seas of thought entirely alone. At last, after the expenditure of two years of time and nearly $30.000, he stood with his new motor on that same screet, and, indeed, on that very same spot where he had seen the two horses fall, ready for his first public experiment. On Aug. 1, 1873, a trial trip was made about 4 a. m.—the terms in the franchise required. the cars to be run by that day. It was a gray morning and the fogs were hanging around on the hills, the ground being slippery from the moisture. But the trip was a suc-

The red headed brute on the omnibus has never been seen on that steep hillside any more since that misty morning. Property on that highest and steepest of the innumerable hills of San Francisco began to advance Did you know that there are more patents in value. It doubled, it trebled. And these high hilltops, overlooking both the bay and the Pacific ocean, instead of being, as of old, the home of the playful and capricious billygoat, are now the palatial abodes of princes of fortune, and quite as accessible as if they lay on the level shores of the bay. But no Chinaman would ride on the cable car.

Companies were now organized all over the We had an explosion of sewer gas in city of hills and sand, and the red haired one of our fine streets here recently. And so, with so many cable cars in of our earthquakes half of the time out here operation, and so many companies eager for until after they have been telegraphed to big dividends, it became a very desirable New York, and then back, by those most in- thing on the part of the managers and dispired romancists, the agents of the Associated rectors to have the patronage of the little Californian who may hate him heartily, as a white man's nickel.

And so a committee was sent to wait on the head of all the little brown men and find out, if possible, why they would not ride on the wonderful little cars that swept noiselessly up and down and all about, without horse, or steam, or man, or any visible means of motion whatever.

It is reported that the grave and dignified head Chinaman smoked his opium pipe in peace and listened long and attentively to all the committee had to say. And when the members of the committee had exhausted all their eloquence and ability by way of explanation and entreaty, the grave little man rose up slowly, laid his big pipe aside, and then, resting his long finger nails on a silken cushion that lay on a rose wood table before him, he half closed his bright and twinkling little eyes and then, very grimly and very slowly, and deliberately, said:

MRS. FANNIE GREEN.

ASHBURNHAM, MASS., Jan. 15, 1886. I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skilful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I should never die in peace till I had tried Hop Bitters. When I had taken two bottles they helped me very much indeed. When I had taken two more bottles I was well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they cured me, and they used them and were cured and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made. Yours truly, Miss Julia G. Cushing.
