WHAT THE WORLD SAYS

Of People Whom All Newspaper Readers Are Supposed to Know.

The Duke of Sutherland recently bought 10,000 acres of Florida land.

Two actresses are trying to get Anna Dickinson to write plays for them.

Sunset Cox's Turkish tale is to be published either this month or next.

Sarah Bernhardt's latest pet is a tiger cat, and the tiger cat is now a fashionable beast.

Col. Ingersoll says he will deliver no more anti-religious lectures. His law practice takes all his time.

Electrician Edison is regarded with such awe by the negroes in Florida that it is difficult to get hands to take his apparatus from the boats.

Bartley Campbell's most frequent delusion is to fancy that he is a Bonaparte or Grant commanding a vast army, or a Shakespeare or a Bulwer composing a great play.

Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins recently presented a library consisting of $400 worth of books to the town of Davis, W. Va., on condition that the citizens should furnish the room, which was promptly done.

Miss Marie Van Zandt, the well known singer, has so far recovered from her stroke of paralysis as to be able to walk about with the use of a cane. Her complete restoration is looked for soon.

Zankoff, the Russian paid Bulgarian traitor, was explicitly informed by the porters that it refused to have further dealings with him because of his bad faith, falsehoods and general rascality.

An eccentric woman, Mrs. Lizzie H. Monmouth, died recently at Canterbury, N. H. She wrote a pamphlet called "Living on Half a Dime a Day." Her circumstances were once prosperous, but when poverty came she shut herself up in a chamber, from the window of which she dropped a rope, in order that benevolent persons might attach alms thereto.

Craig Tolliver, the Rowan county (Ky.) desperado, has been in Cincinnati purchasing dry goods to the amount of $2,000. He is now a deputy sheriff of the county he has terrorized, is a peaceful and law abiding citizen and has a successful business. He never drinks whisky, and has given up carrying a revolver.

Princess Sarah Winnemucca is still successfully running her school at Lovelock, Nev. The Piute children are said to be apt scholars. The school house is on the ranch of Chief Naches, and the little boys are to be taught how to cultivate the soil. The moving spirit in these educational projects is the princess. She has long been steadily striving for the advancement of her people.

Sarah Bernhardt thus disposes of the horse whipping incident in Rio Janeiro: "An unhappy, crazy woman, Mme. Noirmont, at that time a member of my company, insulted me, and I afterward horsewhipped her for so doing; that's all. Of course, in fact, why not? Mme. Bernhardt discovered she had eight cousins in Chili. She says she hates Chili, but is fond of her cousins."

Professor Edward C. Pickering, the director of the Harvard observatory, and his son, William H. Pickering, an accomplished specialist in star photography, will have charge of the scheme to establish a mountain observatory under the Boyden bequest. An experimental station will first be planted on some of the great heights in Colorado, where an altitude of 12,000 feet can be reached, not far from the railroads.

The mother of Gen. Lew Wallace was Esther Test, daughter of Judge John Test, of Indiana. She was beautiful, refined and loving, with the serene manner and tranquil spirit natural to one brought up in the society of Friends. She lived but 26 years, and, lost to her children before her beauty faded, left in their minds a fair image of perpetual youth. In memory of that mother, the gentle Esther, wife of Ben Hur, was named.

Professor Ichisuke Fujioka, graduate of Imperial College of Engineers, Tokio, Japan, and S. Yashima have been in this country since December last investigating electrical appliances of all kinds, with a view to their introduction in Japan. They are at present in Philadelphia. Professor Fujioka, who speaks English fluently, says: "We have the incandescent system in several of our factories, but do not use the lights for general illuminating purposes. I expect to go back in July, and will advocate the general introduction of electricity in all its forms."

A Firm of Fair Doctors. There was a look of surprise on the faces of the employees in the county clerk's office the other evening when two young ladies walked boldly up to the counter and announced that they wanted to take out license to practice medicine in this city.

Fight Among the Animals. A Mexican pony which ran at will about the winter quarters of John Robinson's circus in Cincinnati incurred the anger of an elephant the other day, and the big beast seized the little fellow and threw him against the cage of a young African leopard. The leopard was apparently waiting for just such game, for it bounded against the bars of its cage and sunk its claws into the unfortunate pony's side. The force of the leap started two bars of the cage, and in a jiffy the leopard had quipped its lithe body between them and was free. He at once pitched into the elephant, and in less time than it takes to tell it was so badly used that he retired to a corner of the barn to nurse his wounds. As he lay there his tail stuck through under the boards and was seen by attaches of the circus, who grabbed it from the outside of the barn and hung on, while the leopard screamed and spit and hissed in his efforts to get free. He was thus held until a box was pushed up, into which he was forced.—New York Times.

Investigating Beforehand. A man in Brooklyn, whose wife died lately leaving a very young child, inquired at the surrogate office as to his share of her personal estate, saying that he wanted part of the money. "You are entitled to one-third and the infant to two-thirds," was the reply. "Well," the gentleman said, "that's not enough. I have a lot of debts to pay." "She hasn't have any money," "But I know she must have money in the bank." "How do you know that?" "I found that out before I married her." It was learned that young dudes often visit the office and examine the wills of deceased persons to ascertain how they have provided for their unmarried daughters.

Where the Danger Lies. The chief danger from taking cold is its liability to locate upon some internal organ, as the lungs, the pleura, the bronchial passages, etc. Hagerd's Pectoral Balsam loosens and breaks up the cold, allays irritation and often prevents or cures pulmonary complaints. Labatt's London ale and stout is put up in pint and quart bottles, and is made from the finest barley and the English Kent hops, and is guaranteed perfectly pure. Beware of the imitations. See that Labatt, London, is marked on the label of each bottle. Jas. Crawford, agent.

SUGAR LAND.

I wish there was a land of sweets, Where loaves of sugar paved the streets, Where boys could suck their lollipop, And never, never have to stop.

I'd dig deep wells in sugar sand, And scoop it up within my hand; I'd sit on hills of caramel, And watch the syrup ocean swell.

I'd eat a slender candy cane That I could nibble. When the rain Of lemon- and orange juice Kept pouring down there'd be no use.

In having your umbrellas up, I'd melt my mouth into a cup, And swallow every drop of it; Oh, I should never spill a bit!

My pillows should be spongy cake, Perhaps they'd keep me wide awake; For I might nibble 'em, you know, And then my head would soon be low! —Golden Days.

The daffodil is the flower of fashion at this season in London. Florists' windows are filled with yellow masses of the reigning favorite, and huge corsage bouquets gleam from afar through fog and smoke.
