A Fine Display. Z. Prevost has in his window a fine display of Scotch tweeds for suitings. An attractive feature is the buttons for the coat and vest, which are of the same material as each piece of goods. These look well as they are now shown on each piece. He guarantees an A 1 fit.

Gone Off Too Soon. Capt. Gaskin thinks that with the service of three assessors the population of the city would appear to be nearer 16,000 than 14,000. It is 15,827 now, or just 173 less than Capt. Gaskin thinks it should be. He has not much of a grievance. As usual he has gone off a little too soon.

Nothing Done Yet. Lieut. Col. Villiers says that, though his request regarding a demonstration in Kingston in honor of the Queen's jubilee has been before the militia authorities for nearly two weeks, no answer has been given, nor any intimation made as to what the government will do in the premises. Time is slipping by very rapidly.

Society Exclusiveness. Society exclusiveness prevents your gaining access sometimes, but this is not the case at Hendry & Thompson's, as they are glad to see all who are in want of fine groceries, such as heavy syrup, strawberries, cherries and raspberries, 20c. per tin; calves' feet jelly. Cross & Blackwell's pickles and fine sauces, at Hendry & Thompson's.

At present there are twenty-five taverns, thirteen saloons, twenty shops, and one wholesale house licensed. On Tuesday (April 19th) the commissioners will make their awards.

Convicted and Fined. Three more Scott act cases were heard at Gananoque on Thursday. Josias Abrams, convicted of a second offence, was fined $100 and costs; and John Vanhooser and John H. Brennan were fined $50 and costs each. In one case an endeavour to find out the informer was made, and several ladies and the magistrate were put into the witness box, and yet the information did not leak out.

A Social Gathering. The social in Chalmers' church last night, under the auspices of the mission band, was very successful. Mr. A. Gandier presided, and, after a refreshing tea, presented an interesting programme. J. F. Smith, the missionary to China from Queen's university, made an address. The children sang and gave recitations to the infinite delight of the audience. The proceeds, about $20, will be handed over to the missionary association of Queen's university.

Robinson received orders this week for a phaeton from British Columbia, four road carts from Napanee and Amherst Island, for a pony cart from Morrisburgh; also for citizens, for a track sulky, a Brougham and an English governor's car. The last named will be the first manufacturer in America. The three will cost over $1,300. Mr. Robinson has received the bronze medal of the Indian and Colonial exhibition for his very fine exhibit at the great London exposition. This exhibit has been warmly praised by English and Canadian writers and judges.

All Because of His Politics. Post Office Inspector Griffin has advised D. Wellbanks, who carries the mail from Milford to Picton, that the postmaster-general intimates that "the public interest requires the cancellation of his contract on June 30th. For seven years Mr. Wellbanks has carried the mails, and not a word of complaint has been heard from any quarter unfavourable to the manner in which he has served the government and the public. During the late elections, however, Mr. Wellbanks, in pursuance of his right as an elector and a British subject, voted and worked for Sprague and Platt, and now to satisfy the tory wire-pullers and scribes he has been decapitated.

Harriet Beecher Stowe was forty years of age when "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was published. She is now seventy-five.

SATISFIED WITH ONE.

THE SYSTEM BY WHICH OTHER PLACES ARE ASSESSED.

Nearly all Employ Only One Man—Some for Wards, Others for Whole Towns—A Difference in Results—The Various Committee Meetings—Where to Put the New Engine.

During the week the Whig communicated with responsible parties in all the cities, and in several of the leading towns of Ontario, and answers were asked to the following questions:

"How many assessors are employed?" "If one for the city, town or district, are the citizens satisfied with his work?" "How long has the system been in vogue?"

The replies to hand are as follows: Toronto—There is one assessor for each ward, and a supervisor. The chief officer is paid $1,600, the assessors $450 each. The system has been in vogue for many years.

London—There are to be four assessors, whose salary will be about $400 each. Prior to this year there were two assessors, and they were paid $700, but the system was not satisfactory. By the new scheme districts will be established.

Hamilton—There are seven assessors (one for each ward) and one supervisor for all. Salaries of the assessors $300 each, and of the supervisor $400. This system was introduced three years ago.

St. Thomas—One assessor, who is paid $300. This man has done satisfactory work, and has been in office for five years.

Brockville—Two assessors, who are paid $250 each. The system has been in vogue a good many years, but is not yet very satisfactory, as a good many mistakes occur.

Belleville—One assessor, at a salary of $800. The system has been in use for three years. Our correspondent writes: "No system is satisfactory to those who pay taxes, but the one man assessor gives greater satisfaction to the council. It would be impossible to revert to the old system of appointing three assessors yearly. The chief advantage we derive from one assessor is that he is able to give a better assessment of 'personal' property than we could get here-tofore."

Mount Forest—One assessor at $85. The system has been in vogue since the incorporation of the town, and is generally satisfactory.

Napanee—One assessor, to whom is paid $100, and this has been the rule as long as the place has been incorporated.

Dundas—One assessor does the work, to the entire satisfaction of the electors, for $200 a year. The system has been in vogue for over fifteen years.

The accuracy with which Mr. Gordon has done his work is a feature that aldermen should not lose sight of. In recent years uncollected taxes on real estate have been unknown, but with three assessors—whose appointments were precarious—such arrears were a common thing. The arrears of taxes and interest on lands, owned by non-residents, which accumulated previous to 1879, and which had to be written off owing to incorrect returns made by the assessors, were as follows: 1878, $1,028.93; 1879, $479.22; 1880, $1,768.17; or a total of $3,276.34.

The Streets Committee.

The streets committee met yesterday to open tenders for the making of plankwalks and crossings during the current year. The tenders were Isaac Asselstine, Canum & Clayton, W. Hutton, and Thomas Hutcheson. Hutton submitted three separate tenders for the work, and in them stated the amounts for which he would be willing to do the work in two, three, or five wards. In a letter, accompanying his tenders, Hutton enclosed $50 as a guarantee that he would do his work according to contract. The manner in which Hutton tendered provoked a hot discussion. The chairman remarked that Hutton had not tendered fairly or according to the terms of advertisement. He was not in favour of considering his tenders. If the committee accepted them it would be dealing unfairly with those who had submitted one tender only and done what the advertisement called for. Ald. C. Robinson concurred with the chairman's remarks. Hutton had not tendered in the right way. Ald. W. Wilson argued that Hutton had tendered correctly, that he had a perfect right to submit as many tenders as he chose. He had not asked the committee to accept all of his tenders; he was satisfied if they adopted one of them. Ald. Drennan was also in favour of considering Hutton's tenders. Ald. Muckleston could not stop any longer, as he had to attend an important meeting of the council of the board of trade. The chairman announced that the city engineer would arrive to-day, and that it would be better to discuss the tenders in his presence. The committee should rise and meet on Monday afternoon. The proposition was adopted. Ald. Wilson voted against such a proceeding. He thought that when they went so far as to open the tenders they should have gone further and decided on who should get the work. It was a wrong move.

Fire, Water and Gas Committee.

The fire, water and gas committee held its first meeting last evening. It considered the compensation due to Mr. J. Lemmon for the loss of a horse, which died of fright at a recent fire. It was recommended that in view of the services rendered by Mr. Lemmon and his father for the last fifteen years, (without a similar application occurring) the sum of $100 be paid to Mr. Lemmon.

After the meeting the members adjourned to the fire hall, where an inspection of the firemen and their apparatus occurred. New clothing, for fire use, is absolutely required by the men; also a few necessities for the engines. A conversation took place in regard to the location of the new chemical engine. Ald. Gilderaleve said that in Toronto the chemical apparatus was hurried to the fire first, the steam engines following, but this chief thought inadvisable here, because of the distances to run and the possibility of delay in getting out the steamers. The proposition most feasible is to dispense with the Williamsville fire hall, to sell engine now in it, and place the chemical engine in a building high up on Princess street, a team of horses, to be in the day time in the service of the corporation, to be kept with the new engine to draw it to fire. The firemen were afterwards entertained at Mrs. Thornton's by Ald. Gilderaleve. The discussion was very enjoyable.

City Property Committee.

At the meeting of this committee the petitions of the knights of labour and the guild of St. Paul's church, asking for remissions of rent of the city hall, were recommended to be granted, less the cost of the gas and messenger's fees. James Reid's tender ($43) for three police coats, mattresses and pillows, was accepted. The Kingston & Pembroke RR company will be given permission to erect stables against the fire hall, provided the half of the cost of the said wall is paid to the city.

THAT HUSBAND OF MINE.

CORRESPONDENCE ON THE DRIFT OF DOMESTIC LIFE.

The Wives Tell us How They Have Been Sued in a Matrimonial Sense—Differences in Tastes and Manners—How to Reform the Queer Cases.

We give to-day as much space as we can spare to further correspondence upon the matrimonial question. Other letters, now crowded out, will appear early in the week. But between this issue and that in which the ladies can write again the husbands will have a chance to air their opinions. They will be required to write upon the following lines:

What kind of a wife have you? Is she amiable, winsome and contented? Or is she cross-grained, hard-to-please, and discontented?

Does she make home a little Eden on earth? Does she try to make you attached to it? Has married life been a realization of your dreams about it during courtship? And if not, why not?

What is your opinion of the select sewing society, the ladies' aid society, and the old maids' exchange?

Has your wife asked you to make any sacrifices for her sake and comfort? and have you asked her to make sacrifices for your sake?

Are you two of a kind; two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one? Does your wife believe in scandal, and how do you think society would do without it, anyway?

He's a Perfect Bear.

KINGSTON, March 24.—(To the Editor): Well I never. What will you next ask to make your interesting paper more interesting? I have an old bear of a husband and he knows it. He wasn't that kind of a man before we were wedded. He can scold by the hour and I can't do anything that suits him. His precious mother is constantly thrown up to me as a paragon. But I guess she wasn't always that if her words can be relied upon. I can't cook beefsteak, nor potatoes, nor anything else to suit his fastidious taste. I am of a lively disposition, he is morose, and so there is not always a rainbow of joy about our home. What would you do with a fellow like that? I wrote this more to learn how to treat him than for any other purpose.—MATHILDA.

She Knows Her Place.

KINGSTON, March 28.—(To the Editor): The question has been asked, "Has married life been all that you expected it to be?" My answer is: Yes, and in fact it has been more. I think I have got one of the best husbands in the world, and I have a right to think so, though not boasting, and so has any other woman that has a husband if she feels like it. I think my domestic happiness depends a great deal in the way I treat him. He doesn't ask me to get up in the mornings and build fires, for I think it my duty to do so, and I do it without being asked. I don't have to saw and split the stove wood, but I would be willing to do even that if he requested it. I don't go away from home to make clothes for little heathens when my husband's pants want buttons on and his coat sleeves want new lining. I don't go gossiping to the neighbors' houses and leave him at home alone, and have him telephone to me that he has peeled the potatoes, set the pancakes, and washed the baby, and what will he do next. These things are all right in their place, but when my time and attention are required at home I consider that that is the place for me, and as a result I secure the kindness and love of my husband, which is more valuable than gold.—POLLY.

She Brought Him Around.

KINGSTON, March 29.—(To the Editor): I certainly think being married is better for a man, and probably for a woman as well. I am not so sure about the latter, because I have not given it very much attention, but I do know that my husband has benefited, and I feel certain that his case is one of many. Before he was married he spent his nights mainly about the billiard rooms, and quite frequently playing cards for money. These habits were, to my mind, both degrading and expensive, and I have thoroughly weaned him from them. I did not do this by "nagging," as some women seek to do, but I invited company frequently to the house just for a quiet evening, and sought in every way to provide for his comfort and amusement at home. I became, in fact, his "chum," and now he does not want to go out without me. I have induced him to promise not to take liquor except at home, and also to confine his smoking to the house. In the latter habit I am afraid he is confirmed, but as his only liking for liquor was for the sake of the association he seldom touches a glass now. I consider, therefore, that my old man is better now in every way than when he was a bachelor, and, although he may not admit the fact himself, and may possibly be writing you a lot of rubbish, I know that in his own heart of hearts he recognizes that matrimony has been the making of him. These facts may not be elegantly told, Mr. Editor, but they constitute some solemn truths about one of the sterner sex, who, despite his occasional growling, is very proud of his—LITTLE WIFE.

An Old Man's Pet.

KINGSTON, March 24.—(To the Editor): To-night I read that you desired correspondence upon the kind of husbands women have. I saw the Winnipeg Star to which you referred—a friend sent it to me—and I can assure you that I enjoyed the reading of it. I realize perfectly the object of the correspondence—to interest the people, and at the same time direct shots anonymously at certain faulty persons in the hope that they will see them and be benefited by them. I have, myself, only one thing to regret in my married life—the dissimilarity in age and consequent dissimilarity of tastes. My husband is many years older than myself, and cannot be expected to have the same conception of current events. We often hear it said that it is better to be an old man's pet than a young man's slave, and the youthful mind will be apt to feel the influence of this doctrine if it is preached by mothers or others who have a right to act as advisers. To be petted, and humoured, and made happy so far as surrounding one with luxury can do it, is very pleasant to contemplate, but after all there is a limitation to the happiness of married life if husband and wife are not in perfect sympathy. A man of sixty and a maid of twenty cannot have two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one. This I know from experience. You cannot expect the exuberance of youth from an enfeebled old man any more than you can expect to extract sunbeams from cucumbers. The union of May and December is not as delightful as some people imagine—it is not necessary while there are opportunities for more eligible matches—but it is infinitely preferable to the life which many of my sex have had to lead. I have thought that I made a mistake in not linking my fortune to one of my own age, but it is doubtful if I would have fared any better. My husband is a man of sense, and, upon my word, he seems to stand out in the community as the person light stands out in the harbour. Better, after all, that I should go through life with slackened speed than have as an escort an empty head of the kind too prevalent in this city. Poor things, they are scarcely to be trusted with the care of themselves, and ought not to be burdened with the care of others.—MATTIE.

A Husband's Sample Letter.

KINGSTON, March 28.—(To the Editor): When your invitation for correspondence about "That Husband of Mine" appeared in your paper I said to my wife, who is a very excellent woman but very modest and retiring, now is your opportunity to let the world know what a splendid fellow your husband is. Why, you can answer these questions in such a manner, and that truthfully, too, as to make scores envy your happy lot. But you'd you believe it she would not do it. Of course I knew she refused because of her modest publicty. She was not so modest the day we were married. She did not mind it being made public so long as the knot was so tight that I could never get out of the tangle. Since she has refused to tell what she knows about her husband, and not wishing such an opportunity to be entirely lost, I thought in the interest of the young ladies, who are looking for good husbands every day in the week and twice on Sunday, I would let them know some of the good points I possess. I am regular in my habits. I was so before I was married. I used to call regularly upon my intended every evening and went home regularly from 11 to 12 o'clock, never later than 12. I used regularly to leave her when I heard her father looking for her. Discretion is the better part of valor in domestic affairs anyway. I was regular in my efforts, keeping other fellows from cutting me out it; cost me a great deal of anxiety and no little cash, because I had to be on hand every night and had to take her to all the entertainments that come along. I tell you it was a great relief to me when we got married, as that part of the programme came to an end. I am still regular in my habits, although married. You often hear people say "What a change has taken place since they got married!" implying that change was for the worse. It is not so in my case. I get up in the mornings and put on the fires, seven days in the week; I stay at home in the evenings and nurse the baby; when he is sleeping, I nurse the mother. Of course she says we are getting too old for that kind of thing now, but I like to keep in remembrance the days that have been. I have a beautiful disposition and some other excellent traits of character. But I fear my letter is so long you won't print it, hence I won't say anything more but advise the young ladies to keep a sharp look out who courts them and before they marry any young man to boil him down thoroughly. If they do that the dude will disappear and the genuine article remain.—A HUSBAND.

SENT FOR FIVE YEARS.

Kyle Sentenced—The Manner in Which his Forgeries Were Committed.

William Kyle was sentenced to five years in Kingston penitentiary for having uttered forged promissory notes. Kyle carried on a wholesale liquor business in Toronto, under the name of William Kyle & Co. He got into trouble with his creditors, and when he assigned it was discovered that forged notes had been mixed up with his financial affairs. The Merchants bank prosecuted him, and he was found guilty on Feb. 4th, 1886, of uttering such notes. Kyle was admitted to bail while an appeal was made to a higher court. But it availed him not, and yesterday he stood in the dock and was sentenced. After hearing it he quivered, grew pale and seemed dazed. He was removed to a cell below, where he broke down completely and cried like a child. He was handed a letter from his mother, and this affected him greatly. He is unmarried and about 40 years of age. It was expected that he would arrive in the city to-day.

THE PROTEST ENTERED.

The Documents Forwarded to Toronto—Twelve Different Counts.

Probably before this petition against the return of Sir John A. Macdonald, as member of parliament for Kingston, has been filed in the proper court in Toronto. The documents were forwarded to Toronto yesterday, one by express, the other by mail. The one by express was acknowledged, and orders given for its duplication and deposit along with the necessary $1,000. The Liberals claim the seat for Alexander Gunn. There are twelve different counts for bribery, treating, undue influence, hiring of teams, improper returns, and illegal ballots. It is claimed the election by the counting of legal ballots gives the seat to Mr. Gunn. It is reported that the conservatives have put in counter claims.

The Figures From Governmental Departments—Other Returns.

During last month twelve births and twenty-nine marriages were registered at the city clerk's office. Not a marriage was fled.

The collections at the inland revenue office for the month of March were: Spirits, $6,933.02; malt, $261.27; tobacco and cigars, $9,125.80; bonded factory, $191.58; inspection fees, $64.80; other sources, $100; total, $13,676.47. The receipts for March, 1886, were $13,080.05.

"Tell me not in mournful numbers, Life is but an empty dream."

And yet it is when all the marrow is taken out of it by some dread disease like consumption, that neglected, means certain death; catarrh and bronchitis both distressing, and often leading to consumption, or like liver complaints or scrofula, which too often make those afflicted feel that life is empty. But these can all be cured. The use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," the great blood, lung and liver remedy, does away with "mournful numbers," brings back lost health, and fills life full of dreams of happiness and prosperity. All druggists sell it.
