WAS HE A FENIAN?

Sir John Brenon Says He Was Not—Suing For Heavy Damages.

LONDON, May 2.—The libel brought against William Ridgeway, publisher, for $25,000, for asserting in the black pamphlet on the Irish question, recently issued by him, that Sir John Brenon, the plaintiff, a former home rule member of parliament, was a Fenian and ally of the Invincibles, came up for trial to-day. The court room was crowded in anticipation of interesting developments. Mr. Ridgeway, being called, pleaded that the alleged libel was true. Sir John Brenon being sworn, made an emphatic denial of the defendant's statement. Sir John said he never was a Fenian. He left the land league in June, 1880, after a quarrel with its managers for opening his telegrams. He had not since that time joined any Irish league or association or any Fenian league or association. He had never travelled between Paris and London on Irish republican business. He had never interfered with the work of tracing. Sir John declared that Sir Lion Playfair, told him that Mr. Gladstone had become converted to the home rule theory in 1879, and that he desired Mr. Parnell to accept the office of chief secretary for Ireland. Witness spoke to Mr. Parnell about taking the office, but he declined even to entertain the idea.

Death of an Estimable Lady.

Her charity was performed unostentatiously. She was 63 years of age, and her demise falls with great sadness upon a devoted husband and five affectionate children. Next Sunday in Christ church, Cataragui, the funeral sermon will be preached. The deceased lady was a sister of Edward Hinton, William street. Her death was the result of apoplexy.

CRIMES ACT DISCUSSION.

MR. GLADSTONE TAKES A HAND IN IT—THE VOTE TAKEN.

The Closure Applied at the Suggestion of Hon. W. H. Smith—The Liberals Desire to Have the Proclaimed Districts of Ireland Specified, and the Government will Not Have it.

LONDON, May 2.—In the house of commons, Mr. Healy moved that the first clause of the Crimes bill be so amended as to indicate clearly to what portions of Ireland the bill would be applicable. He suggested that the words "proclaimed districts" be omitted and that "Kerry, Londonderry and Belfast" be inserted in their stead. Mr. Balfour declined to accede to this proposal. Mr. Healy asked if bloodstained Belfast was to go free, while the miserable rack-rented districts in the southwest were to be punished. Mr. Balfour replied that the government would exercise perfect impartiality in suppressing disorder everywhere. Mr. Labouchere said the scope and aim of the bill was to crush out the nationalists, leaving the orangemen to do anything they liked. The administration of the law was so bound up with the orange faction that it could not be impartial. Mr. Gladstone suggested that the words "proclaimed districts" remain, but that the districts be defined under the other clauses of the bill. The answer of Mr. Balfour, that all districts would be treated impartially, was not sufficient, because the ministers had often referred to the particular parts of Ireland where the bill was meant to operate. No doubt the people of Belfast regarded with disgust and horror the prevalence of disorder in their midst, but the same apology was equally good for other districts. The conduct of some persons in Belfast recently stained the name of Ireland more than the conduct of the people of any other part of Ireland had. [Cheers.]

Lord Randolph Churchill said that the suggestion of Mr. Gladstone had made, might have been valuable, but its value had been destroyed by the raising of points which were calculated to lead to a controversy. Mr. Gladstone had made himself a party to the insinuation that the government intended to apply the clause only to certain parts of Ireland and leave Belfast out. There had been disorder in Belfast, but the law had not been arrested. There was no analogy between the riots in Belfast and the "moonlighting" in Kerry, for which not a single person had been amenable to justice. No one would venture to assert that the juries in the north of Ireland had failed to do their duty, as was often the case with juries in the south of Ireland. To put the diabolical outrages of the south, as Mr. Gladstone did, on the same level as the disturbances in Belfast, was to condone and apologize for those outrages. [Cheers.]

Mr. Healy replied that over 300 persons were maimed for life and some killed in the Belfast riots, and that only a few of the rioters had been punished. He said that the statement had been untrue that there had been no convictions in Kerry. There had been over twenty. Mr. Holmes said that not a single moonlighter had ever been convicted. Mr. Healy postponed his motion in deference to Mr. Gladstone's suggestion.

An amendment, proposed by Mr. Healy, that an enquiry be held only when evidence has been withheld on account of intimidation, was rejected by a vote of 206 to 110. Mr. Healy then moved that the high court be empowered to order an enquiry. Mr. Gibson, solicitor general for Ireland, replied that the government was unable to accept the amendment. Mr. Gladstone, rising to reply to a statement by Mr. Elliott that he (Gladstone) was responsible for the equally strong system of five years ago, said that Mr. Elliott over-looked an essential difference, namely, that his bill had been directed against crime, while the one under discussion was not. ("Cries of 'Oh! Oh!'") At least, he added, the present bill was directed against acts that had not hitherto been considered crimes. He would not renew his former proposals, because he was convinced that they aggravated the evil. Mr. Haldane, home rule liberal, proposed to substitute "judge" for "high court," and Mr. Healy assented. The discussion being continued, W. H. Smith, first lord of the treasury, amid cries of "shame," moved to enforce the closure rule. The motion was carried by a vote of 257 to 135.

Mr. Gladstone and the other opposition leaders walked slowly into the opposition lobby, while the Parnellites and Gladstonians stood cheering wildly. Mr. Healy's amendment was then rejected by a vote of 261 to 142. Mr. Nolan moved to report progress on the bill. W. H. Smith said the government was unable to agree to this, because only nine of the 140 amendments to the first clause had been disposed of. Later, however, progress was reported.

Meeting of the Unionists.

LONDON, May 3.—The meeting at the Devonshire house, on Saturday, appointed a committee consisting of Lord Hartington, John Bright, Joseph Chamberlain, Sir Henry James, and others to discuss the points of dissension among the unionists, and to consult with the government with the view of adjusting the differences. At a meeting to-day all the differences were arranged except with reference to the venue clause of the Crimes bill, which Mr. Bright and the majority of the committee wish to reject while Lord Hartington and his followers want it retained.

Early in the eighties he saw a good deal of money swallowed up in unsuccessful land speculations in the north-west. He is unmarried, and looks as if he was heart-whole. He has a pleasant, straightforward manner, and those who know him best like him, though he is not addicted to too many intimates. The office he has just been appointed to is a lucrative one, those who think they know estimating that the fees will average between $5,000 and $8,000 each year.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

INTERESTING QUESTIONS UNDER CONSIDERATION.

Better Terms to the Maritime Provinces—The Fishery Outrages an Exaggerated Affair—Points Against Imperial Federation—Election Irregularities.

OTTAWA, May 3.—The session of the commons was largely taken up by a discussion of the claims of Nova Scotia, not for a repeal of the union this time, but for better financial terms from the dominion.

Sir Charles Tupper, in reply to a question from across the house, made a significant promise to Prince Edward Island. At present the island subsidy is $173,537 a year. According to Sir Charles Tupper the government proposes to increase it by $200,000.

The Nova Scotia application for an enlarged subsidy was advanced by Mr. Jones, the repeal leader from Halifax, and Mr. Flynn. The claim for better terms is based upon the expenditure the province has made upon local railways. In default of an increased subsidy Mr. Flynn predicted a diminution in the provincial educational grant. No reply was given to the Nova Scotia speeches. The government, however, is not overlooking the interests of the province. The railways promised during the last election will be before parliament this session, and no doubt, on motion of the government, to subsidize or build them.

The fishery question was lightly touched upon during the evening by Mr. Ellis, who had read the American accounts of the so-called outrages and evidently believed them. The minister of justice explained that the reported outrages are exaggerations, produced by men who wish to use them as the basis for claims upon Canada for compensation.

An episode of the evening was a speech by Mr. Edgar on imperial federation. His view is that imperial federation may endanger the special privileges of the French in Canada, and that precautions should have been taken even at the conference to protect them. One good point Mr. Edgar made on the subject of imperial federation was that Canada has enough to do to govern herself without mixing in imperial concerns or undertaking to furnish statesmen to advise in the matter of the government of Great Britain and her dependencies.

The complaints regarding election irregularities were advanced a stage. Two questions were put to the premier and were evasively answered. To one, as to whether the government would pay the expenses of the polling in Queen's, N.B., if it were declared that Mr. Baird had been elected by acclamation. Sir John Macdonald replied that the government could only decide such a case when it arose. To the other, as to whether the government had had any communication with the clerk of the crown in chancery on the subject of gazetting, he gave as a response the advice that the papers, and of course there can be none, had better be moved for.

In order to overcome election irregularities of a different kind Mr. Edgar has introduced an amendment to the election law. Its chief features are provisions to limit the number of certificates a returning officer can issue, and to enable a deputy to swear to his returns before the poll clerk. The inability of the deputies to swear to their returns almost put Mr. Holton, of Chateauguay, who had received the majority of votes, to the same trouble as that affecting Mr. King, the majority candidate for Queen's, N.B.

The next election case to be discussed in the house is the Haldimand case. Mr. Casey has given notice for all papers connected with it, and it is probable that he will introduce a lively debate.

The anti-dissolution deputation has arrived and the air is full of protests against monopoly. The delegates and the Manitoba, North-West and British Columbia members consulted with closed doors for over two hours in the afternoon, but failed to agree upon any definite line of policy. The simple fact is the case is going against Manitoba. The North-West contingent are hopelessly divided. It is stated that Mr. Ross, of Linsgar, will even defend disallowance in the house. The only member whom the Manitoba delegates can count upon faithfully to support their demand in parliament is Mr. Watson, of Marquette. Pressure, however, has been put upon Mr. Watson, and he has no alternative but to allow himself to be governed by these representatives, and therefore his resolution will stand in the meantime. The people of Manitoba have declared their confidence in the government, and it remains to be shown what manner of return they will receive. The liberals have little cause to exercise themselves on the subject, and will probably be disposed to leave Manitoba's chosen tory representatives to fight it out with the government.
