

THEY MUST BE LEADERS.

THE CHURCH MUST GO TO THE FRONT—GOOD MEETING.

Public Meeting in Queen Street Methodist Church Last Evening—Religion Can Alone Give Permanency to a Nation—What is Needed of Church Members—Why Hoard Money?

There was a fair audience in the new Queen street Methodist church last evening. The people had gathered to listen to addresses, to hear the excellent choir, and to drink in the music of Prof. Reyner. After religious exercises Mr. B. M. Britton, G.C. was appointed the chairman. He said that the church people were glad to enter their new home. He then proceeded to present the needs of the church. During the past few years $35,877 had been invested in church property, and at present the debt is $11,300. On Sunday the collections and subscriptions reached nearly $2,000. From the liberality displayed by the church people in the past Mr. Britton was satisfied that the amount needed ($6,000) to put the debt into such a shape that it could be easily handled, would be forthcoming. The trustees did not intend to canvass for the money. They wanted all gifts to be voluntarily bestowed. Acknowledgment was made of $20 anonymously given on Sunday, and of $100 from the late James Burgess, who, before his death, did not wish anything to be said about his contribution. The other gifts of pulpit chairs, gas fixtures, clock, electric lighting apparatus, etc., were acknowledged, as was also the fine Sabbath school organ in the lecture room, the gift of W. A. Rockwell.

Rev. H. F. Bland claimed that religion alone gave permanence and cohesion to a nation. He reviewed what civilization, education and commerce had tried to do and failed. The greater the religious life of a nation the greater its peace and prosperity. He urged the people who desired to see christianity prevail to sustain the churches making them the centres of light in the community about them.

Rev. Dr. Douglas talked about leadership, and pointed out that not one nation that had christian men as leaders had ever been destroyed. And what does this church mean? he enquired, and replied Leadership. The members of it should be leaders in all moral reforms. They should be leaders in the temperance work, much of what had already been done being in danger of reversion by parliament. He called upon the Methodists to see that the work was sustained, and by their prayers and their testimony, to stand forth as advocates against the most appalling reality that had ever tarnished the national life. Then the church people should be leaders in the social conditions of society. They should show their fidelity to Christ by their lives. He urged them to fight shy of the dancing mania, now prevalent, and to abhor card playing, two evils that were already finding recognition in Methodist homes. He thanked the Lord and his Scotch parents that he had never known one card from another. Then the people should not live within the walls of the church; they should not concentrate all their sympathies upon it; they should go into the streets, gathering the poor wanderers in; they should have visiting bands at work and under their leadership he was satisfied that the beautiful church, a gem of architectural design, and another ornament to the old limestone city, would in three years be too small to contain the crowds, and would have to be enlarged by sweeping galleries. Then they should be leaders in benevolence. In this respect he told of old time Methodists in Montreal who hoarded their money, and in handing it at last to their children cursed them and sent some of them to dishonored groves. He urged Kingstonsians to use their opportunities. He knew that in the Methodist churches of Kingston, there was more wealth than in any place from Halifax to British Columbia, and he advised the men who were hoarding their money not to do so, but to use it in order to prevent the interest in the spiritual church from languishing. If they did this, grand old Kingston, dear old Kingston, the love of his early years when his eyes was undimmed and his natural strength unabated, would rise in moral strength, in virtue, in beauty, and her power would shed a lustre in the coming ages, and the tale of her greatness would be told from sea to sea and from the rivers to the ends of the earth. "May your church prosper more and more," he said in conclusion, "until at last we shall clasp hands on the banks of eternal deliverance."

The musical programme was even better than that of Sunday. Prof. Reyner played with great ability the "Hallelujah Chorus," by Handel, at the conclusion of the service, rivetting the attention of the audience. The people were indisposed to leave the building, so rapturous was the music produced. The choir was in excellent voice and sang finely. The solos of Mrs. Rockwell and J. M. Sherlock were superb. Never were they heard to better advantage, and the audience broke into loud applause at the conclusion of them. The programme in full was:

Organ—"Overtures to Stabat Mater." Anthem—"Father Almighty to Thee." Organ—"War March of the Priests." Solo—"There is a Green Hill far Away." Mrs. Rockwell.

Solo—"Abide With Me," J. M. Sherlock. Organ—"Hallelujah Chorus," by Handel. Organ—"Hallelujah Chorus," by Handel. Before separating Rev. Dr. Douglas arose and tendered thanks to the choir for its music. His heart had been thrilled by some of the notes given out. In thanking the singers and organist he felt he was but echoing the feelings of the large congregation.

TO THE PUBLIC.
We Take Great Pleasure in Announcing the Coming of America's
Most successful physicians and surgeons of the Erie medical and surgical association of Buffalo, New York. With the largest staff of medical and surgical experts of any institution in the world, we can safely say they stand to-day at the very head of those engaged in the healing art, and they acknowledge no superiors. To-day their association stands upon the established basis, and is recognized as a power in the medical world. They have proved conclusively by the thousands of cures which have rewarded their exertions that their staff is not only capable but skillful in the specialties which they exclusively treat. They have won by the best of the titles the right of success, that they have no superiors and few equals. In their specialties is their boast. Never to fail in the successful treatment of chronic diseases or deformities is their ambition. We would cheerfully recommend them to all who are afflicted with chronic diseases or deformities. They will be at the Windsor hotel, Kingston, Saturday, May 14th, and will remain until Wednesday night, May 18th.

Information Wanted.
John B. Andrews, of Lavant station, K. & P. R., Ontario, formerly of Blow Norton, Norfolk, England, wishes to hear from two uncles, named Job Andrews and Henry Andrews, or from members of their family now in Canada. Information of their whereabouts will be gratefully received.

REPRESENTING FATHER LAND.

The New Minister From Germany at Washington—A Handsome Man.

BARON H. VON ALVENSLEBEN.

The gentleman to whom is entrusted the responsibility and honor of being envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of Germany to the United States, was not a stranger in Washington when he arrived in that city on his present high mission. From 1869 to 1871 he served in the American capital as secretary of legislation under Baron Gerlot, who was at that time the German minister to Washington. Baron H. von Alvensleben is a bachelor of about fifty, distinguished looking, tall and dignified. He is a thorough Prussian in appearance, having light hair and beard and a fair complexion. His services as a diplomat are of long standing and appreciated highly by his imperial master. After he left Washington, in 1871, he was appointed to a subordinate position in the foreign office at Berlin, where he remained but a short time. From the foreign office he was sent to St. Petersburg as first secretary of the German embassy. Later he was the official representative of the German empire at Bucharest, in Roumania. Subsequently Alvensleben was transferred to Darmstadt, as minister to the grand duchy of Hesse. He afterwards was sent as minister to the Hague, the Netherlands, from whence he came to the United States.

SHAW BY-LAW AGAIN.

A Merchant Defies the Law—In Bad Humour Over its Enforcement.

John S. Henderson, Brock street, was before the police court this morning, charged with an infraction of the Shaw by-law. He said that on Saturday he was busy, and goods delivered during the forenoon had been left out. Mr. Gordon said that they were on the sidewalk on Monday. Mr. Henderson said that if they were it was not with his knowledge. He went on to say that the merchants were becoming very much annoyed over the law, and would have it repealed. He thought the officers had other work to do besides looking after the boxes and barrels left on the sidewalks. There were other by-laws not enforced and the council didn't want this one to be enforced either.

The magistrate said that as long as the by-laws were unenforced they would be enforced. "Do you plead guilty?" was asked.

"I don't plead anything," was the testy reply.

Police Officer Duncan said he found two barrels, headed up, with pineapples upon them, and two cheeses on a box, in front of Henderson's store on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Henderson explained that his clerks were so busy that they could not remove them. "How long," he enquired, "can goods be left on the sidewalks after their delivery?"

"A reasonable time," said the magistrate.

"Well, how long's that?"

The merchant got no reply.

"You can fine, and I'll pay," said Henderson, "and the next time I'll do what was done on Saturday."

After the policeman had signed his testimony Mr. Henderson was fined $5 and costs.

"Well," said he, "I just expected that. How much is it? I want to pay it and get away."

A TRIP UP THE QUINTE.

THE SCENERY AT THIS SEASON PARTICULARLY PRETTY.

Meeting Old Friends by the Way—The Improvements in the City—Picton Harbor and the Activity Noticeable in it—Business Reported to be Quiet.

It has been my custom for many years in summer time, when the boats are running, to make two or three trips to Picton, leaving home on the afternoon of Saturday, spending a quiet Sunday in that pleasant town with my friends, and returning home again on Monday. It makes a pleasant outing, is good for the health, and who can go up the Bay of Quinte when the weather is fine and the water is not too rough in the Gaps without enjoying the beautiful scenery. My trips generally do not commence until June, but this season I resolved to commence earlier, and on Saturday last a little after 3 o'clock, I wended my way to Gunn's wharf and stepped on board the Hero. Time was soon up, the whistle was blown, the engineer was signalled, lines cast off, and we steamed out of Kingston harbour. Taking a walk over the boat I noticed that everything was neat and clean, and had a newish look. Capt. Nicholson and Purser Hooper were at their posts, and seemed to pay all necessary attention to their passengers, of which there was quite a number on board (and considerable freight) but chiefly for the ports near Kingston, viz., Stella, Bath and Emerald, at which places most of the freight was put off. At Bath about half the people of the village seemed to be down on the wharf, thereby showing the pleasure they enjoyed by the presence of their favourite steamer and the return of the shipping season.

Among the passengers was my young friend, Mr. F. Kane, late of K.C.I., now the teacher of the public school at Adolphustown. He had been home to see his friends for a few hours, and was returning again to his post, to be ready for duty on Monday morning. I also met an old Kingstonian in the person of Mr. George Howe, who is now a resident of Ottawa, but was on his way to visit a daughter who lives at Cherry Valley, a village a few miles out of Picton. I had a long talk with him about old times, for I had not met him for many years. He remarked that Kingston was much improved, that a number of fine public and private buildings had been erected since he had left the city, and more were in course of erection, and I felt proud of the workmen of the old limestone city when he said that what work was done in Kingston was always done well. The buildings all looked well and substantial. There was no place where work was done better than in Kingston. Mr. Howe was a prominent man in Kingston before he removed to the capital. He did a good business as a painter and decorator on Bagot street, near Johnson, was a musician of considerable talent, master of the Baptist church choir when Rev. Mr. Lorrimer was pastor of that church, and leader of the Kingston choral society when it numbered among its members Messrs. Beet, Jones, O'ford, John and David Kemp, Phippen, W. and J. Howe, (his two sons), and many lady vocalists, few of whom are remaining with us. Mr. Howe will also be remembered as an accomplished flutist. The sweet tones of his ebony tube are not easily forgotten. Soon after leaving Emerald the steward and his assistants made ready the evening meal. The table was nicely set and well supplied, and the waiters attentive. On several wharves on the way up we noticed long boxes, said to contain trees and shrubs from the Rochester nurseries, which were awaiting the arrival of the agent to distribute them among the different customers. The copious showers of the last few days had refreshed the earth and the grass of the meadows, and the sloping hill sides looked beautiful and green, but the trees seemed rather backward in their leafing, the willow being the only tree showing the color of its spring dress.

We arrived at Picton at about 8 o'clock. The trip up was a very pleasant one. Picton harbour presents a lively appearance to-day compared with what it was when I first visited it away back early in the fifties. The steamer Empress of India was at one of the wharves, ready to start on Wednesday for Toronto, to take her place on her usual summer route, between the queen city and Port Dalhousie, and for the accommodation of excursionists. Several other steamers and many sailing crafts and pleasure yachts were in the harbour, which had quite a business look about it, and in memory I recalled the time when the Henry Gildersleeve, with Capt. Gordon Finkle and Purser Franklin Carroll (afterwards captain of the steamer Bay of Quinte), and Capt. Bonter and the Novelty ran the bay route. I spent a quiet Sunday in Picton. Went to church in the morning and heard a really excellent and impressive sermon from the Rev. Mr. Loucks, and the afternoon and evening I spent with my friends, talking over the past with its lights and shadows. On Monday I rose and breakfasted early, and to a stroll through the town. Stores and residences are improved and added to every year. The usual summer visitors have not yet begun to arrive. Yet the town seems full and there are not any unoccupied residences, still the merchants report business as quiet and the "ready" not very plentiful.

I visited some of the busy places of the town, among them Moxon & Barker's stove foundry and agricultural works. Mr. Moxon reports that their stove trade of the past season was satisfactory. The roller and plow trade has been good this spring, and they have disposed of between eighty and ninety cultivators, and are now commencing the manufacture of harrows. I also visited the canning factory of my old friend, Wellington Boulter. He and his manager were away on business, but I was given liberty to go through the works by the person in charge. The old factory was burnt down some time last June, but has been rebuilt, and another large building is to be added to the premises this spring. The only work at present going on is the manufacture of cans for the vegetables and fruits. I fancy it would startle some of our Kingston tanners to see the quick way in which the work is manipulated. There are about twenty hands at work (men and boys) making cans. They can turn out about 9,000 cans per day, and cut up from five to eight boxes of tin per day. Their soldering irons are heated in gasoline furnaces. The sizes of the cans are from one pint to one gallon, but the greatest number seem to be quart size. They expect this year to double last year's output, and will get up 700,000 or more cans, the following being some of the quantities they will likely put up: Corn, 200,000 cans; peas, 150,000; tomatoes, 200,000; berries, 100,000. This summer they are to receive some opposition in the business, as a new canning factory is in course of erection further down town by Mr. Anning (a brother-in-law of Mr. Edwin Chown, and late of the firm of Anning & Moxon, of Picton.) Mr. Anning has associated with him Messrs. Miller and Wright, so when the two factories are in full blast the fruit and vegetable business must boom in Picton.

Some of the far-seeing men of Picton are talking about making a road or esplanade or line of docks under the hill to the right as you sail up the bay, from the head of the bay down to the old wharf. This would greatly improve Picton as a shipping port, but the project has been talked of before and I am afraid that Picton will be a much older town before it is carried into effect. Hephurn's wharf and store houses are now at the head of the bay. Near it is Irving & Down's saw mill and sash and door and shingle factory, and adjoining Hephurn's is the Rathbun Co.'s lumber yard and wharf, and business seems to be booming along this line.

On my homeward trip I left Picton by the steamer Hero at a few minutes after 9 o'clock, and arrived in Kingston and stepped ashore on Gunn's wharf at 1:30 o'clock, having thoroughly enjoyed my trip.—O. E.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The Cream of All Ales.
Lahatt's London ale is clear and sparkling, put up in pint and quart bottles. Jas. Crawford, agent.

Seize the Opportunity.
You may never have the chance of hearing the Alpine choir again, as it soon returns to Europe. City hall to-night.

Tamarac
Is not an ordinary mixture. In fact its properties are entirely different from any preparation used for coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles.

Another Fire Occurs.
About 4 o'clock this morning a frame building, located near Sydenham street, and owned by Mr. Nolan, was burned. Origin of the fire unknown.

The Electric Light.
The electric light company will commence stringing wires towards the end of this month. A new engine, which is being made in a western town for the company, will arrive the first week in June.

A Military Ball.
A ball will be held at the barracks on the 25th inst. The officers of the Governor-General's Foot Guards are invited to attend it, but as they have to leave the city on the evening of the 24th inst., they will be unable to appear.

Asking for More Power.
At a special meeting of the shareholders of the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation company, the directors of the company were authorized to apply to the Quebec legislature for power to issue debentures to the amount of $300,000.

Tenders For the Luncheon.
At a meeting of the Governor-General's Foot Guards committee, held yesterday afternoon, the tender of J. McLaughlin, to supply a luncheon for the guards and members of the 14th battalion, was accepted. There were no other tenderers.

Police Court—Tuesday.
Josie Wilson, the cause that led to the assault of police officer Tuttle by "A" battery men, was sent to the Mercer reformatory to-day for twenty-three months. McCarty and McIntyre have been retained in the assault case, and judgment will be given to-morrow.

Deserted His Family.
It is said that a carpenter has deserted his wife and four children for the association of a country maiden, who managed a city hostelry for a relative. The friends of the unfaithful citizen are tracing him down. This is the second time he has disappeared from his home.

Obliged to Re-Order.
Having had such a run on our first lot of Scotch tweeds we have been obliged to re-order. This lot is a choice selection of patterns, and those in need of suitings may depend on getting something nice. They range from $13.50 to $20 a suit. We guarantee a first-class fit. Z. Prevost, New York clothing store.

College Endowment Fund.
A meeting of the jubilee fund committee of Queen's college was to have been held yesterday afternoon, but there was not a quorum. It was considered by those present that the canvass for subscriptions was not being as vigorously prosecuted as it should have been. A meeting will be held on Thursday evening to discuss the matter.

Important Telephone Patent Decision.
The minister of agriculture has again decided in favor of the Bell telephone company of Canada, and rules that its three Edison patents are valid. The petition of the Montreal parties against these patents was dismissed on 7th inst. This settles the question of patents on transmitters, and is the most important victory ever gained by the company in this country.

He was Buried To-day.
The late M. E. O'Brien, of Prescott, died at eight o'clock on Saturday night. The Brockville Times said a little over a month ago he was taken ill with dysentery, which assumed a very aggravated form. He rallied, then the disease assumed a typhoid form and resulted in his death. The funeral occurred to-day. The body was conveyed from Prescott to Brockville by carriage, and by a special train to Perth where it was interred.

Death of Mrs. Ashley.
Yesterday morning Mrs. Ashley, wife of John Ashley, late keeper of the court house, died very suddenly at her son-in-law's residence. She had been a sufferer from rheumatism for years, and it is supposed that the ailment reached her heart, stopping its action almost instantly. The deceased lady was 65 years of age, a woman known for her kindness and affection, and the mother of a most estimable family. The bereaved ones are commiserated with in their sudden affliction.

Armour & Co.'s Great Business.
Armour & Co. killed last year 380,656 cattle, 1,112,969 hogs, 85,777 sheep. In order to handle the product of these animals they employ 5,000 men daily, and occupy buildings that cover thirty acres of land, giving a floor area of over eighty acres. Their chill room covers twenty acres. Their storage capacity is 90,000 tons. The cooked corn and lard meat sold by Jas. Crawford is from the above firm, and every pound of meat is guaranteed to be of the best quality.

A Finicky Young Sportsman.
Reports from Manitoba tell of an adventure with a mountain tiger on the bank of White Water lake. Alexander Kirkwood, son of the late Alexander Kirkwood, of Verona, Frontenac, while out on a duck hunt, ran across the furious animal and fired one shot, wounding it and leaving him in rather a dangerous position. The lad ran out of ammunition, and being only fourteen years of age, was afraid to attack him alone, so he returned home for ammunition. There not being any men at home he took his little sister Jennie and Minnie Abernethy along to the scene of his hunt, and found the tiger ready to fight. But he shot one and killed the animal and brought it home. It measured 5 ft. in length, 20 in. in height, and weighed 50 lbs.
