THE DAILY WHIG.

"Opifer per Orbem Dicor."

We are inclined to coincide with the Toronto News and hold that the attitude and language of the ministerial press indicates that they do not expect that the late leader of the opposition will ever again take an active part in politics, otherwise their unwonted generosity would be tempered by prudent reflection as to the use to which their encomiums might afterwards be put by their opponents. We hope none of them will have occasion to regret anything they have said.

Mr. Miles O'Reilly, of New York, is a typical jurymen. He was among those called to serve in the Sharp boodle case, objected to because he said when asked what his duty as a juror was, "To go with the majority." There are many like him, without personal aspirations, individuality and discrimination. They don't think they have a right to use their own judgment, at least they don't use it, and seem to be content to be led by all manner of demagogues any where, to any lengths, and through any degradation. The thought of it is revolting.

The St. John Telegraph resists the repeated attacks of the clergy upon the secular press. It declares that the secular press has at least the courage of its convictions, that it denounces or defends without regard to the power or rank of the offender. The pulpit has not a like courage. For the exposure and condemnation of wickedness in high places, and national sins, the secular press has done more than the pulpit and religious press put together. That the clergy, in their speeches, make statements of a contrary character indicates their unacquaintance with the facts, or their indisposition to do honor to whom it is due. Suppose the secular press retaliated? It wouldn't be pleasant for some of its assailants.

A STINGING REPLY.

Sarcasm, no matter how playfully intended, sometimes leads to serious results. This has been painfully apparent to the editor of the London Free Press. He, some days since, undertook to touch up the editor of the Goderich Signal after the following fashion:

"Now that the Fenian editor of United Ireland has finished his tour how would it do for Mr. Daniel O'Brien McGillicuddy, of the Goderich (grit) Signal, to start out with a lecture on 'The shortcomings of the queen, the governor-general, and the tory party in Canada?' Anything to catch the vote?"

And the editor of the Signal returned the compliment in this way:

"When Josiah Blackburn, of the London Free Press, states that Editor O'Brien is a Fenian, and when he insinuates that Daniel McGillicuddy is an upholder of disloyalty, then he has foully and deliberately lied, and the truth is not in him. When the Fenians invaded Canada in 1866, and when Josiah Blackburn hid in an office recess of the Free Press (then published on a back street in London), Daniel McGillicuddy was one of the first to be enrolled for active service in the 14th batt., at Kingston, in defence of his adopted country against the invaders. The Free Press is only the mouthpiece of that gang of loyalists which is composed of men like Jim L. Hughes, Josiah Blackburn, and that nondescript, Dr. Wild, who shout loyalty for revenue purposes only, and who would cease to be loyalists, and would cry out against the governor-general, or the queen, or any one else, 'Crucify them' if the pap were held back."

Mr. McGillicuddy is a graduate of the WHIG office, and, like all who have received their training in it, knows how to defend himself and to resent any insult offered to his manhood or his patriotism. He has a right to feel warmly under the circumstances; and yet why worry about what some people say? Their talk upon the question of loyalty is simply disgusting. Hon. Mr. Jones, of Halifax, correctly characterized it the other day in parliament when he said it reminded him of the courtesan's everlasting boasting of her purity. "There is," said he, "a certain kind of flunkeyism which I do not entertain, and of which I leave the monopoly to the gentlemen opposite." Mr. McGillicuddy may not be as lip-loyal as his assailant, but the government will know where to find him should the country demand of every man to do his duty.

THE WHIG'S POSITION.

The Mail, whose independence and candour are things political the public, if not the party, appreciate, criticises the WHIG's utterances on the Queen's County election case in such a manner as to suggest the conclusion that they have not been fairly understood. That the liberals premeditated wrong doing we have no evidence except that presented by Mr. Baird in his defence of the usurpation of a seat to which another man had been unquestionably elected.

If it appeared as clearly to the WHIG as to the Mail that both sides were determined to win, "fairly if possible, but to win anyway," it would be equally generous and impartial in the distribution of its censure. The time has gone by when the press can afford to blink at political rascality, and in so doing make sacrifice of the truth. The WHIG has a desire for honest criticism, and if the liberal party cannot stand this in connection with the Queen's County election case so much the worse for it. It is declared that the liberals raised 1 1/2 most paltry objections, and upon them sought to take advantage of their opponents, that it was claimed a whole district should be disfranchised because the deputy returning officer had failed to place a seal over the key-hole of the ballot box. "Surely," says the Mail, in its elaboration of this point, "the WHIG cannot regard this claim as less objectionable than that regarding the failure of the deputy to swear to his return." It is indefensible, if fairly stated. The voice of the people, through the ballot, has a right to the profoundest respect. It should not be ignored by any party, nor should that party dare to act in defiance of it. In an election case should be taken to ascertain how the votes have been cast, and for whom the majority of them has been returned, and these facts being established the returning officer, or his deputy, should make his decision accordingly. Thus he will be obeying the spirit of the law, let the lawyers dispute about the letter of it as they will. This has been our contention in the discussion of other cases, and it can undergo no alteration in this case.

So far the WHIG and the Mail have not been so much out of accord as it was supposed they were. Now comes the point, however, on which this paper was stated to use remarkable language, i.e., "that certain parishes deserved disfranchisement on the ground that the reviser who prepared the lists was not a barrister of five years' standing, rather that the conservatives deserved to lose their vote because of the alleged informality." Such is a remarkable view, but it is not the WHIG's. It does not think the lists should have been rejected; indeed it has stated that though the liberals objected to the manner in which they were made up there was no testimony upon which to found the assumption that the sheriff of the county would reject them and refuse to use them. True, he would not give Mr. Baird an assurance to that effect, simply because he represented the right of any man to question his official integrity and exact a pledge from him for which there was no occasion. The WHIG argued that Mr. Baird had no reason to believe that he would not be accorded fair play by the sheriff, or that any undue advantage would be taken of him in the observance of the law. If it had had proof to the contrary it would have spoken out with equal force. It wants no election crookedness. The liberal who cannot succeed without it is better out of parliament, and for his failures the WHIG can offer no apology.

Enright in Training. D. T. Enright, well known to the amateur sculling world, will blossom out into a professional. Enright has been in hiding at Glamors, near Picton, for some weeks with his friend Mr. Campbell, of Toronto, living in his trim little shell most of the time. They say that Enright has developed great speed. On the quiet waters of the bay, most of the time as smooth as a mirror, he has a good five mile stretch without a turn. SEASONABLE POETRY.

How dear to my head was the Fur Cap of winter.

The nice curly cap that now I am fain To swap for the sable and felted newcomer.

Which, because it's so light I return to again.

But like to the Crofters' thatched hut of Kilkenny,

That the soft summer breeze may creep thro' any day,

Is the welcome Straw Hat, because lighter than any,

And cheaper; it costs but a quarter in May.

And GALLOWAY'S is the place to get it.
