DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Collections Towards Expenses-The Prople Liberal-Incidents of Interest.

OTTAWA, June 17.—The proceedings of parliament seem to enliven as the time for prorogation comes nearer. The debates are marked with a force that was not felt until recently, and none of the members seem in any great hurry.

Wallace, M.P., have created some stir in the city. Sir Adolphe Caron said he had been informed by the deputy adjutantgeneral that thirty short Enfield rifles had been supplied to the Ottawa Catholic college, but no ammunition, that the cadets wore a zouave uniform, that they had not been inspected for four years, and that he did not know whether they drilled with the United States army tactics.

Hon. Mr. Trudel, in the senate, directed the attention of the government to the movement in the direction of returning to Canada which is being organized among the Canadians in the United States, notably in the cities of Lawrence and Lowell, Mass., under the direction of Drs. Janson and Leprohon. Mr. Trudel inquired whether it was the intention of the government to do something towards encouraging this patriotic movement, by making grants of land to societies for organizing such movements.

The county council of Bruce has petitioned for the repeal of the Canada Temperance act and the acts amending the same. The municipal council of the county of Wellington has a petition to the same effect. The Sons of Temperance of Lindsay on the other hand pray that no legislation be adopted which will mar the efficiency of the Canada Temperance act, or permit the sale of wine, fermented or malt liquor under its jurisdiction, but that such amendments be made to the act as will provide better machinery for enforcing its provisions. Several petitions of a similar character are coming in daily.

The house of commous sits again to-day, being the second Saturday that it has had a session. Government orders are being taken

The Nova Scotians keep sending up petitions to the commons and senate, asking for the suppression of all railway and steamboat traffic on Sunday. The observatory at Toronto gets a grant of $5,250 while Kingston gets the large sum of $500. The marine hospital at Quebec gets a grant of $20,000, and $35,000 is appropriated for the same purpose for the maritime provinces and British Columbia. Kingston again gets the heavy sum of $500.

Sir John A. Macdouald stated in the house yesterday that the government had had no communication, written or verbal, with Mr. Baird regarding his proposed resignation of Queen's county, N.B. It is reported that Mr. Baird will resign after the session and challenge Mr. King to another

It appears the friends of Lieut. Col. Gray have not met with that success they ex pected in connection with his appointment as commandant of "C" battery, British Columbia. Lieut. Col. Holmes will keep that position and also do duties as deputyadjutant-general until the military district is enlarged. The excitement in thecity over the mysterious drowning of Mrs. James Smith is not abating. Whether it is a case of suicide or foul play is not known, but suspicions point to the latter.

It is expected that prorogation will take place next Saturday. Sir Charles Tupper is expected in Halifax next week to attend the marriage of his son,

W. J. Tupper, barrister, Winnipeg. to a daughter of Chief Justice McDonald The parliamentary and departmental printing has been awarded for another year to Messrs. McLean, Roger & Co., and the binding to Mr. Mortimer, jr.

At the meeting of the committee on agriculture Mr. Sproule moved a resolution of thanks to the chairman. Mr. Wilson expressed the hope that no such episode as that by which he claimed the liberals were counted out wrongfully on the disallowance bill would again take place. Mr. Hesson aid Mr. Watson's resolution was a put-up job, and the liberals were drummed up for the occasion. Mr. Watson accused Mr. Hesson of lying. He said he had consulted no one, nor had any attempt been made to obtain a catch vote. Mr. Hesson challenged Mr. Watson to fight, but the latter, who is a powerful man, laughed at the challenge, and said Hesson was an old fool. The vote of thanks was passed. The chairman, Mr. White, in returning thanks, expressed the hope that future chairmen would manage to satisfy all parties.

Look Out For Squalls. WINNIPEG, June 17.—The Free Press says : "Manitoba has long been muttering : it now behooves her to assail the ears at Ottawa with unmistakeable words. Mr. Watson said there would be serious trouble. We repeat the words with gravity and solemnity. If we are interfered with now there will be trouble such as Canada never saw in the lurid moments of past convulsions. There will be a rebellion such as the sleeping gods at Ottawa never dreamt of."

The Chicago Wheat Deal.

Ситскоо, June 17. — The principals of the late wheat clique are losers to the extent of $4,000,000 to $5,000,000. Their followers and tools are losers to fully the same amount. The collapse represents about $10,

BROADBRIM'S LETTER.

VARYING LIGHTS AND SHADES OF LIFE IN NEW YORK.

An Editor Who Had a Brief but Brilliant Existence-He Made Money Rapidly. but He Burned the Candle at Both Ends, and His Lafe Went Suddenly Out -Starving Children to Death.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, June 17 .- For many months past you might have noticed in the leading papers whole columns of advertisements of "K-Wren." "K-Wren, what is it?" people inquired, and soon it was discovered that it was one of the thousand and one infallible remedies for coughs and colds. It was the invention of the talented young editor of the Wall Street News, Charles D. Keep. For several years he used to make up the prescription and give it to his friends. Then some one suggested that he give it to the public. The idea pleased him, and at once he invested $60,000 in advertising To-day he is dead. His life reads like a romance. A few years ago he came to this city, so poor that he had not the money to pay for his lodging. Ten cents would have done it, but he did not have ten cents, so he went to sleep supperless that night in a coal box. Five years from that time and his name was as well known on Wall street as that of Russell Sage or Jay Gould. The penniless adventurer blossomed out into a daring speculator and became a power in the street. For years he was the financial The pointed questions asked by Clarke | editor of the New York Times, and one of the lucky few that got tips when tips meant gold. As an instance of how this thing is done, there is a young man on the street who furnishes the financial for a great metropolitan journal. The business of the day was over and he was on his way up to the office to write up the news of the day. On the corner of Wall street and Broadway he met one of the heaviest operators on the street and they stepped into Delmonico's to get a sociable drink. The operator looked at him a moment and said, "- now don't ask me any questions, but if I were you I'd buy some oil early to-morrow morning. Mum's the word. Good day." Oil was selling at 50. My friend hurried out, borrowed all the money he could rake, which was not much, but on the strength of this hint he put up his margin. Oil ran up to 126 when he sold, and the profits of his venture were over ten thousand dollars. Mr. Keep knew everybody and was an exceedingly popular man, as much so as a man of his positive nature could possibly be. He had besides the reputation of being a thoroughly good fellow, and he made friends of both bulls and bears. A few years after he came upon the street, without a penny, he was generally supposed to be worth a million, but he took all of the chances of the street and at his death was said to be worth half a million. Only thirty-eight, yet utterly and hopelessly stranded, wrecked, lost to his family and friends. What brought it about you ask ? Wall street. The candle was burning at both ends. No rest, no surcease from toil, his very pleasures and amusements being framed with an eye to business. Oh, the dreadful fever of that Wall street life to a man whose nerves are like electric wires! Charles D. Keep was always a worker. He did the work of five or six ordinary men. His head was planning, plotting, figuring all the time, and every day new schemes of fortune rose before him. He used to say that any fool could make money, and he only cared for it for the power it gave him. A short time since he looked as though he had many > work, died of Wall street. Our sister city Brooklyn is startled by the horror of a child starved to death in the home for friendless orphans. The wretched child was Mamie Holland, about 10 years of age, and when the inquest was held on her emaciated little body she was little more than a skeleton. The Brooklyn Engle published the weekly bill of fare which reads like some horrible story in Dickeus. Bread molasses and water for breakfast, molasses and water and bread for dinner, bread and molasses and water for supper. No meat, no vegetables, or only one potatoe a week. Fathers and mothers, who sit around your abundant boards and smile to see your own children fill themselves with all the good things of earth, think of these two hundred and tifty little prisoners, whose only crime was poverty, kept week in and week, out from one year's end to the other, on this horrible nauseating diet. How their little ravenous stomachs must have yearned for a mouthful of meat, or a green vegetable, or a bit of fruit. The little prisoner was released at last. God in his mercy let her die, and the doctors whom examined the little stomach found nothing in it. The child was literally starved to death. Yet the house in which she perished it a magnificent structure, bountifully endowed with a fashionable board of directors, who are received on visiting days by the matron in her beautiful parlors, and if she were to be taken as of living at the home nothing better could be desired. She is supposed to live on the same food as her wards, but the finest of fowls and the tenderest of beef, the best of vegetables and fruits load the matron's table, while the wretched wards perish on bread, molasses and water. The report has created a profound sensation in our sister city, making it evident that there is yet abundant work for the home missionary in the city of churches.

Two fires have occurred in Brooklyn, involving a loss of nearly two millions. At Cyprem Hills cemetery a ceremony took place the like of which was never witnessed in any land before. It was, as the principal actor declared, a new era in our civilization. Mr. Louis Mosquero is aged eighty-five and has amassed a moderate fortune. His wife and sister are dead, and having no children, he concluded that the best way to dispose of his fortune is to rear a monument to himself. At considerable cost he erected a fine granite column in Evergreens. His own virtues and those of his wife and sister have not been overlooked, and he has also left to an admiring posterity his views in regard to the future structure of society. He would wipe out all cities. No more love for him. At eightyfive he cannot understand why such nonsome as love, with all its follies, should be allowed to exist. Perhaps when we get to his eighty five we may think so too. About four hundred people amembled at the dedi-

Mr. Mosquero did himself full justice. A blank is left, after rehearsing Mr. Mosquero's virtues, for his death, and when that is filled up the whole thing will be com

A novel suit is now before the courts in which one Henry Eiseman is complainant and Henry Reeg, president of the Journeyman brewers' union is defendant. Mr. Eiseman gave offence to the union, and was expelled. Mr. Eiseman went from brewery to brewery looking for work, but wherever he went the walking delegate followed him and drove him out till at last it looked as though the man and his family would starve to death. At last, driven to desperation, instead of shooting down the walking delegate he appealed to the law, and now he sues the brewers' union for $22,000 damages.

A couple of weeks ago I mentioned the case of James Burns, the gravedigger at Holy Cross cemetery, whom Bishop Loughlin of Brooklyn refused to discharge because he would not join the Gravediggers' union. Poor Burns has had a hard time of it since. He went to the butcher's to get some pigs feet, and a chuck steak but the butcher turned him out of the shop and refused to sell him even a sausage. He stepped into a saloon, and thought he would take a morning nip of sour mash. The barkeeper told him whiskey was a dollar adrink, so he fled in affright. He went to the grocer's and ordered a head of cabbage, two bundles of wood, and some loose pickles. The grocery man refused to sell him anything for love or money, and requested him to carry his patronage to the little grocery around the corner. But the little grocery around the corner wouldn't have him. It suddenly occurred to him that he hadn't been shaved for a week, and he said to himself-"Mebbe me looks is agin me ; begorra I'll get shaved an' hav me hair cut, av it cost me fifteen cints." So he hied him to the nearest barber shop and seated himself comfortably in the chair. The knight of the razor had just given a flourish of his shears and comb, preparatory to beginning on Mr. Burns' fleece, when a man rushed into the shop and whispered something in the barber's left ear, and in less time than it takes to tell the story Mr. Burns was bounced out on ithe sidewalk. Mr. Burns still digs graves and receives his regular dollar and seventy-five cents a day, but if he can't get a drink of whiskey, or a shave, what is he to do? You will say, buy a good "Wade and Butcher razor, and join the T.A.B.'s." So far, so good, but behind all that stand the butcher, the baker and candlestick maker. Perhaps the best thing after all for Mr. Burns to do would be to dig his own grave and jump into it, for it is very evident that there is no room on this earth for a man of his stamp. -Broadbrin.

THE "WORLD'S" BALLOON.

It Has Been Seen in Different Places-It Was Drifting Far Northward.

Sr. Louis, June 18.—Up to midnight reports had been received here that the World's balloon sent up yesterday was seen at Nashville, Centralia, Mattoon, and Decatur, Ill. Nashville and Centralia are almost due east from St. Louis, and within a distance of aixty miles, while Mattoon and Decatur are more than a hundred miles north and east. If the balloon was really seen at the latter places, and especially if the report from Detroit is correct the eronauts must have struck a very strong northern and northeastern current after 7 o'clock to have been carried so far out of the due easterly direction in which they were moving up to that hour. Some apprehension is felt here that a heavy storm was struck which drove them towards the lakes. Toronto, June 18.-The New York World's balloon passed St. Thomas this morning moving in your direction. Keep a look out for it, and advise if it is seen.

Sr. Louis, June 18.—A telegram from the World's balloon correspondent, Duffy, says they were compelled to land at Hoffman, Clinton county, Illinois, near Centralia, at 8:14 o'clock last night.
