THE JUBILEE PROCESSION AS SEEN IN LONDON YESTERDAY.

A Most Magnificent Spectacle-Scene of Unparalleled Grandeur in Westminster Abbey-Loyal Millions Cheer Her Majesty-Gorgeous Array of Decorations all Along the Royal Route.

London, June 21.—The first day of the fifty-first year of the reign of Queen Victoria over Great Britain opened with perfect summer weather in London. A lovelier day could not have been desired for the celebration of her majesty's jubilee. The sun shone brightly, the air was clear and not very warm, and a gentle breeze blew steadily. The crowds scattered over the city are unprecedented in numbers and size. Thousands of people who yesterday selected locations along the route of to-day's procession in order to retain them, occupied their stations all night and many used camp stools or improvised rests to enable them to withstand the long and tiresome occupation. A steady stream of carriages and pedestrians poured constantly all night until dawn through the city from all directions towards the west end. At five o'clock every point of vantage along the streets composing the royal pro-cession route was secured. At 9 o'clock the line of route was on each side a compact mass of people. Everybody, despite the discomfort of the crowding, manifested the utmost good humor. The scene at Westminster abbey was most brilliant. Every seat was filled, and every person present was a distinguished person. When the indentities were enumerated it seemed as if every locality of the world over had sent one or more of its representative persons to do honor to England's queen on Britain's greatest holiday. There never probably in modern times assembled under one roof an audience so well and so brilliantly arrayed.

Every man present entitled to wear a uni form or decoration had it on. When this audience was all seated the scene presented was incomparable. When the sun shone brightly through the noble stained windows of the abbey its rays fell upon an unaccustomed sight, and the picture was indescribable. This audience banked, up as it was in church was anything but sombre. For a while when all were seated there was quiet, but this was temporary and lasted only long enough to enable people to locate one another. Then there was great life, recognition and gossip, and it graduated rapidly into a noisy hum. This was startling to a person who entered suddenly, considering the place and who were buried there, but the stranger was soon fascinated and accustomed himself to what struck him as desecration. Busy and interested as were the people making this irreverent congregation some personages entered the abbey strong enough to compel general attention and recognition. When the Marquis of Salisbury, the queen's prime minister, entered and proceeded to the place set apart for him he was cheered. When Mr. Gladstone was observed quietly edging his way to his seat he was also cheered.

The Line of Procession.

The line of procession from Buckingham palace to Westminster abbey was as follows: From the palace portals along Constitution hill, Picadilly. Regent street, East Cockspur street, Northumberland avenue, the Thames embankment and Bridge street to the abbey. The line of route was kept by nearly 10,000 troops, representing al branches of the service, and in addition six hundred boys from the naval training ships were drawn up at the base of the Nelson monument. In addition to the military. many thousands of police, both mounted and foot, were on duty under the command of Sir Charles Warren. The military forces were under command of Gen. Gipps and Colonel Stirling, of the Coldstream Guards. The particular feature at Buckingham palace was that the two services were equally honored, the guards lining one side of the roadway at Buckingham palace gates and on the other side the blue jackets were posted. The same services were also presented in a like manner at the entrance to Westminster abbey. The first of the royal procession was composed of the Indian princes and a few minor German princes.

Punctually at 11:15 a.m. the queen, in an open carriage, emerged from the palace gates. At sight of her thousands of voices were lifted up in cheers, the applause being accompanied by the music of the many military bands stationed in front of the palace. The queen did not wear her state robes, but was dressed in black. Her carriage was drawn by eight ponies. The Prince of Wales, the Duke of Edinburgh, Duke of Cannaught, her sons; the Crown Prince Imperial of Germany, the Marquis of Lorne, Prince Christian of Schleswig Holstein, and Prince Henry of Battenberg, her sons-in-law; and Prince Albert Victoria, and George of Wales, Prince Alfred of Edirburgh, and Prince William of Prussia, her grandsons, all rode in full uniform beside the queen's coach as a body guard. When the people at the palace had shouted themselves hoarse cheering for the queen, they continued to cry out, "Long life to the Prince and Princess of Wales!" The queen, as she left the palace, seemed to be in excellent spirits, and she smiled and bowed graciously to the people on every side. The queen's carriage was a large one of chocolate color, wheels red, and the royal arms in gold emblazoned upon the panels. Red morocco harness was used for the horses, which were otherwise decorated with royal blue ribbons. All servants were state liveries of scarlet and gold. The other carriages containing members of the royal family were of a georgous character, horsed with four boys each and all open. The procession proceeded at a smart walking pace into Constitution hill and then slowly made its way until the Wellington arch was reached where the first introduction to the London streets ensued. Emerging from the Wellington arch the first to greet the queen were the convalescents, patients and others at the hospital, which was packed from the basement to the roof, seats having been erected for many thousands over the rooms of the hospital.

On reaching Piccadilly the queen was seen to look up at Apsly house, and as she passed the mansions of her intimate friends she glanced somewhat hastily at their abodes. more especially when passing the Duke of Cambridge's, Baron Rothschild's, Baroness Burdette-Coutt's, and John Bright's old apartments.

It was not until Devonshire house was reached that the queen began to realize the grand preparations that had been made to greet her. Here the Marquis of Hartington had had a spacious gallery erected, from which many hundreds of gaily dressed la-dies waved their handkerchiefs and cheered the queen. Facing Devenshire house, at the Bath hotel, was another booth. On the pro-cession nearing the abbey the troops saluted, guns were fired, the church bells rang out merry peals, and flags went up, the cheer-ing being continued until the queen had passed into the west door. After passing through the vestibule her majesty was conducted to the grand dais under the lantern tower inside the abbey. The picture was one of surpassing beauty. The lords and ladies had arrived early. Many of them confessed that they had not breakfasted and ex changed sandwiches and wines. On the arrival of the queen the throng was absolutely dazzling. The ladies discarding their wraps and displayed their jewels, which flashed and reflashed as they reflected the rays of the sunbeams that found their way through the transepts. When the queen reached the dais she looked very pale and somewhat fatigued, but she soon recovered and wore a bright and composed countenance throughout the service. She was sur-rounded by thirty-two members of the royal family. In the abbey three tiers of galleries with seats were erected, seating about ten thousand persons in order of rank. The workingmen's representatives from all parts of the kingdom had seats allotted to them. When the services, which were conducted according to the programme, were completed, the queen's sons knelt and kissed her hand. Then on their arising she kissed their cheeks in return. The princesses were next to go through this ceremony. The queen kissed some of the latter twice, especially the Princess of Wales and Princess Beatrice. This was followed by a general hand-shaking among the royalty and nobility. The queen belowed two resounding smacks upon the lips of the Crown Prince Frederick William. The princesses all wore light dresses.

The music was entraccing. During the performance of "Athalie" the queen took her departure for Buckingham palace.

The queen showed no ill effects after the completion of her long and arduous duties. She was in excellent health. After a short rest on returning to the palace she reviewed the naval brigade from Portsmouth. In the evening she entertained sixty-four royal guests at a banquet in her own room, and one hundred and thirty members of the various royal households were entertained at other tables. The queen will drive out at 11 o'clock this morning.

What They Wore.

The queen's dress was not striking. Across her breast she wore the brocade blue ribbon of the garter. The only other decoration she wore was that of the order of Cobourg-Gotha. The most conspicuous figure in the procession was the German Crown Prince, whose magnificent physique, set off by a snow white uniform, shown conspicuously among the princely throng. The Prince of Wales, who wore the familiar uniform, seemed insignificant in comparison. The Grand Duke Sergius, of Russia, who wore a curious but picturesque cape was, after the German Crown Prince, much the most striking figure. Upon the dais the princesses were light colored dresses, except the Duchess of Albany, who was attired in black. The Crown Princess of Germany wore a robe, the front of which was of eileer and golden embroidery of Turkish design, wrought with real silver and gold thread. The train was of pale French gray corded silk. The front was gracefully tied with loops and long ends of dark olive green velvet. The bodice, made high to the throat, was of silk with a vest of the embroidery, bordered narrowly with olive green velvet. She wore a bonnet of the same embroidery as on the front of the dress, trimmed with gray tulle and olive velvet ribbon. Among the dresses of the peeresses, that of the Duchess of Bed ford was notable for softness and grandeur of color. It was of royal purple velved, trimmed with antique Molines lace. The bonnet was of the same materials as the dress. The Duchess of Manchester wore a dress of white and gold moire, worked with gold thread and gray silk in arabesque design. The Duchess of Roxburg wore train of black broche gauze over white silk, draped with black lace. The Duchess of Sutherland and her daughter wore robes of broad striped satin and moire, draped with jetted gauze. Generally, the dresses of the adies in waiting outshone those of the royal parsonages present.

Incidents of the Day.

Fifty persons are reported injured. The injuries include fractured heads and broken

At Pembroke a man was killed by falling from a rock. At Redcar an artillery corporal was killed by the explosion of a gun charge

One man was killed by a horse. Several patients were also admitted to Westminster hospital, who were suffering from prostration. Three are seriously ill. While the procession was passing through Pall Mall three persons were sun struck. A number of persons were crushed into insensibility and removed to hospitals. Several policemen were overcome by the heat and taken home in ambalances The horse ridden by the Marquis of Lorne threw him. The queen stopped her carriage and asked the marquis if he was injured. He assured her that he was not. He walked alongside the carriage a short distance, then mounted another horse and continued his journey by a shorter route to the abbey, having relinquished his place as one of the royal escort.

All Britain is En Fete. Baron de Rothschild paid the entire expenses of the jewish service. It was the most representative jewish gathering seen in many years.

In every town in the kingdom the day was appropriately observed. In the cathedral cities thanksgiving services were held, municipal banquets given, and volunteers reviewed. Local societies paraded, and meetings were held at which addresses of congratulation to the queen were adopted the day closing with general illuminations In garrison towns royal salutes were fired. There was a special parade of the troops at Edinburg, where the decorations and illuminations were beautiful. At Glasgow 50,000 poor children were given a holiday fete. Inst of the Scotch towns celebrated the jubilee on Saturday, yesterday being devoted to fetes to children and the poor. At Dublin many buildings were decorated with flags and illuminated at night. The Royal society gave an athletic festival in the afternoon. Two cathedral services were held. At Cork and other Irish towns the day was similarly observed. At Windsor a feu de joic was fired in the home park by the Cold stream guards. There was a regatta and a fete on the Thames. A special service was held in Eton college. Both towns were brilliantly illuminated in the evening. At Manchester the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Bands playing national airs paraded the streets. The troops were reviewed and numerous charitable festivals held. At Liverpool, Bermingham and other industrial centres there were similar celebrations.

A Fight in Cork.

DUBLIN, June 21 .- A fight occurred in Cork, between the loyalists and nationalists, during the review held in honor of the queen's jubilee. The nationalists paraded past the reviewing ground, carrying black flags. This angered the loyalists and they attacked them. During the fight shots were tired, but no one injured. In several towns in Ireland the nationalists hoisted black flags. In each instance the police tore them

CORK, June 21.—A mob attacked the office of the Constitution, conservative, and smashed windows in the building. The police charged on the mob, but the rioters broke through their ranks, injuring several of them. The police made another charge on the mob with drawn staves, which they used with good effect, dispersing them.

Revolutionists Have a Display.

Paris, June 22. The Irish revolutionists celebrated Queen Victoria's jubilee by giving a black banquet at a restaurant in Belleville. The rooms was decorated with Irish, American, and French flags, and on the mantelpiece lay an effigy of the queen, with a banner appended bearing the word "Ven-geance." Speeches were made advocating the union of England's enemies.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TALK IN THE LOBBIES OF PARLIA-MENT BUILDING.

Why Didn't Sir John Macdonald Explain His Connection With the O'Donoghue Affair—Senator Vidal After the Chinese -Line of Steamers Between Canada and France.

OTTAWA, June 20. - There is considerable comment in the city about the refusal of Sir John A. Macdonald to explain his conduct regarding the O'Donoghue affair. It is now rumored that O'Donoghue placed the let-ters with Dr. Landerkin as he said faith was broken with him by not compensating him for his brother's confiscated land and goods.

Dalton McCarthy, it appears, was the one who stopped the little game as he decided that it was illegal and unconstitutional to make refunds of moneys to compensate persons outlawed and convicted of rebellious treason to the crown.

Hon. Oliver Mowat had a conference with Sir John A. Macdonald to-day. The two premiers seemed to be quite warm friends. Hon. Mr. Ross, provincial treasurer, accompanied the little premier. The provincial subsidy question was the subject under consideration.

The fishery question has received a boom and it is thought that vigorous measures will be resorted to this season to prevent American vessels practising on the grounds of our fishery preservers. Sir John A. Macdonald appears to be satisfied that Great Britain will back him up, and the old man consequently feels rather cocky over the "fish pond" The cruisers have been ordered to vigilantly watch the coast, and we may expect this summer and fall a livelier time than last season. The ministry say that the U.S. and Canadian governments are on the best terms, and arrangements are being negotiated to a peaceful settlement of the vexed question. Great Britain, it is believed will not surrender any of our rights without the assent of our government. So Sir John stated so to parliament.

Senator Vidal created some fun in the senate yesterday when he moved that his bill to repeal the Chinese Immigration act, which was ruled out of order a day or two ago by the speaker, should be restored to the order paper. The act levies a tax on the Chinese entering Canada, and Senator Vidal's bill was ruled out on the ground that the senate could not do anything involving the destruction of revenue, as the commons has the sole right to deal with such subjects. The discussion became hot and heavy, some of the senators contending that the bill did not properly concern dominion finances, but Hon. Mr. Abbott ruled that the passage of the bill would be a violation of the privileges of the house of commons, when Mr. Vidal withdrew his motion.

The honour conferred on Dr. J. A. Grant. of this city, who has received the order of K.C.M.G. for his eminent services to science and the medical profession, is greeted here with great satisfaction. He is fifty-seven

The governor-general's levee held to-day was a grand affair. The reception took place between the hours of 4 and 7 o'clock. The societies of the Sons of England attended in a body and presented their compliments to his excellency and Lady Lansdowne

The governor-general has decided to visit Peterboro in August next and review the Army of Patriarchs Militant which will congregate there. The local canton will accompany him as a body guard. The LO.O.F. will run monster excursions from the capital, and a large one from Montreal. Lieut. General Underwood, of Covington, Ky., will be present and conduct the prize drill.

All the arrangements have been complet ed for the establishment of the regular line of steamers between Canada and France. The service will be a fortnightly one, and is calculated to build up a trade with the lat-Mr. Baird purposes resigning at the close of the session of parliament, but he will not be a candidate again. Sir John has offended him. They never speak as they pass by. Parliament has just granted 4,051,200 acres of land to three railway companies in the North West.

Among the railways aided by the new government grants is the Napanee, Tamworth & Quebec, four miles from north end of section, subsidized two years ago, $3,200 a mile, total $12,800.

WHAT IS SAID OF THEM.

The 14th. is Very Well Thought of During its Visit to Montreal.

The Toronto Globe correspondent says "the Princess of Wales' volunteers of Kingston, who were present, made a fine show. The Mail correspondent says that in the march past "it was the general opinion that amongst all the troops the Kingston boys took the palm. Although they had been all night on the train they presented a remarkably steady appearance. Their splen-did marching was the theme of general admiration, and as they passed the review point they were greeted with loud applause from the assembled thousands,"

To-day's Montreal Herald says: "The first proceeding of the day's festivities worthy of chronicling was the arrival from Kingston of the 14th "Princess of Wales Own Rifles." Of the many military corps which have visited Montreal none have found more favor with our citizens than did the gallant 14th, not only on account of their appearance and drill, but also for their personal good conduct. sobriety and general courteous behavior."
