SPEAK NOW!

Mr. Travis, the disappointed candidate for a North West judgship, is making things unpleasant for the minister of justice. Some time since he charged Mr. Thompson with deception of the grossest and most unpardonable description. The attack did not have the desired effect. At least if it caused the honourable minister any discom fort he gave no outward manifestation of it. Then Mr. Travis fired a second shaft at his opponent, and charged that Hon. Mr. Thompson owed his seat in parliament to the most unblushing bribery, which bribery was practiced by one of the government's revising officers.

It is said that this person had been em ployed by Mr. Thompson on previous occasions, and was thought to be a useful man in a close election. But he was disappointed at his reward being withheld, and, having formed an alliance with Mr. Travis, peached upon his employer. He told Mr. Travis, as that gentleman is reported in the Ottawa Free Press, that, "when the general election was about coming on, he, at the request of Mr. Thompson, and supplied with a government railway pass, returned to Antigonish to enter on another bribery operation for the minister of justice. He went into it wholesale, supplied with money by Thompson, buying up votes largely, claiming that his acts secured the minister's election. Travis directed his attention to the fact that Mr. Thompson had but a majority of 41, and that, therefore, 21 votes of these the other way would have defeated him. Travis asked him if he had bought that number of votes? He laughed at the moderation of that idea and answered 'far more!' After the election he returned to Ottawa, and rendered a written account to the minister covering the whole of the bribery operations. He then set out the different sums paid the different bribed voters, including an amount paid to another briber, whom he named, for certain votes purchased, 'to be accounted for by him,' and, then, having a balance of $40 on hand, he paid this back again to Mr. Thompson by a cheque."

Of course it is to be remembered that the men who make this accusation are the avowed enemies of the minister of justice. They were once his pets, and, under promise of lucrative appointments, stood by him when he needed their sympathy and their service most, during a hot election. They did not get what they wanted, probably because they were too exacting in their demands, and they seek to wound him and ruin his reputation. At the same time it is also to be remembered that Mr. Thompson, politically speaking, has been keeping very bad company and cannot escape its contamination. He may be inclined to treat with contempt the scandal with which his name is connected, but he cannot afford to do it. He may not be as bad as some of his colleagues, but he is just as eager to hold office as any of them, and is probably not above a resort to ways that are dark and tricks that are

SCREAM OF THE EAGLE.

In the notes of the American Law Review the fishery difficulty is sharply dealt with. The editor, having opened the number with two ably written articles-one discussing the case from a Canadian standpoint and the other discussing it from an American standpoint--proceeds to criticize them, and thinks that over the difficulty, such as it is, English-speaking people should not talk of going to war. "We are prospering," says the Review, "and so is Canada, and each is benefited by the other's prosperity. We entertain a kindly feeling for them, and we have reason to feel that the feeling is reciprocated. Canada being the smaller country, in respect of population and present re sources, is possibly sensitive on the subject expressed by the word 'apnexation,' just as Denmark, Holland and Belgium are sensitive on the subject of losing their own nationality and being swallowed up by their more powerful neighbors. But the word 'annexation' is hardly ever spoken of or thought of in the interior of our country."

It is observed that most Anglo-Americans regard political union with Canada as likely to come about sonner or later, but it is declared that there is not a spirit of Chauvinism in the United States, unless, perhaps, along the Canadian border. Political union would be beneficial in some ways, we are told# "it would abolish a cordon of custom houses three thousand miles long, and would forever remove the causes of such chafing as is now taking place between the two countries. But such an event does not lie anywhere in the near future." So far in this article there is nothing to seriously quarrel about. The language is so conciliatory ! But the Canadian people are reminded of the danger they run in provoking their cousins to anger. It is questionable if the matter ever appeared in this light before : "It would take a train of ills, more serious than any that have grown out of the fisheries' controversy, to excite the masses of the American people to the point at which they would feel willing to go to war with Canada read to many the W. Diver of P. C.

but if a war should finally be precipitated it could have but one result : a political union between Canada and the United States. The American people have long since outgrown the habit of doing things by halves.
They would end the question as they ended the slavery question—by cutting up the cause of the controversy, root and branch.
In short they would overrun and annex Canada. Such a war would not be permit-ted to end in any other way, and England could not prevent it from ending in this

Will this species of intimidation have any effect upon the Canadian government? Will it induce the British covernment, through which the fishery negotiations are being conducted, to abandon any material point over which there is now a difference of opinion? Will it suggest a surrender in any respect? Not at all.

The fishery difficulty is the creation of the Americans. They were not satisfied with the arrangements existing under the Washington treaty. They were too selfish. They wanted not only all the fish but the markets for them, and sought, after an abrogation of the treaty, to "poach" upon Canadian territory and profit exclusively by their plunderings. Had they known as much about international law before the treaty went as they have learned about it since the American fishermen would not have forced the issue. It is plain, from what has been said in parliament, that the Canadians cannot recede from their contentions, that the view of our government is the view of the British government, and that the colonial secretary has emphasized this fact over and over again. The Canadian cruisers have been commissioned to keep the American fishing smacks out of Canadian waters, and if they are not equal to the requirements there is another and a greater navy upon which requisition can be made. Canada is under the protection of a flag which is not likely to be buried as a "trophy" in the cellar of the war department at Washington.

The Rapacious Yank.

OUR LITERARY COLUMN.

Among the Leading July Magazines-A Jubilee Poem of Great Merit.

We have seen many poems suggested by the queen's jubilee, and written in honor of that event, but among the best is that of Dr. Massie, of Keene, a valued contributor to the WHIG. It has been beautifully printed at the Examiner office, Peterborough.

Mr. Eadweard Muybridge, whose instaneous photographs of "The Horse in Motion," in 1882, astonished the world, has been working in the same line for the past four years under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania. About $30,000 have been expended, and 100,000 plates have been exposed. The Century secured the right to the first publication of a selection from these pictures, and in the July number they will appear. Dr. Buckley writes on "Christian Science' and 'Mind-Cure.'" Among the curiosities of the article is the "Prayer for a Dyspeptic. In July Harper's the strongest article is the one on "A Printed Book," a sequel to the June article on "A Sheet of Paper," in the series of great American industries. A charming set of illustrations by E. A. Abbey, illustrating the anonymous ballad of "Phillada." One of the eight, entitled "Will had her to the Wine," is the frontispiece for the number. The famous African traveller, Joseph Thomson, contributes an important article on "A Central Soudan Town," illustrated from photographs taken on the spot. The serial novels develop interestingly. The third of Dr. Ely's second series of social studies deals with "The Future of Corpora tions." Charles Dudley Warner's "Mexican Notes" are centred upon the picturesque and salubrious cities of Morelia and Patzcuaro; and added to the feast of able articles, beautiful pictures, and strong serials are very bright short stories. "Bayou L'Ombre," by Grace King, is charming, and "Aunt Randy," by Annie Trumbull Slosson, is well described as."An Entomological Sketch" of a quaint down-east character. The editorial departments of the July Harper's are peculiarly well-laden.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate. IN NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

Dr. O. C. Stout, Syracuse, N.Y., says: "I have no doubt of its efficacy in all cases of nervous prostration. I gave it to one patient who was unable to transact the most ordinary business; as he explained it, his brain was 'tired and confused' upon the least exertion mentally. Immediate benefit followed the use of the Acid Phosphate, and he owed his recovery to it."

A Delightful Trip on the Maud. Citizens who want a delightful trip should take advantage of the Mand's excursion down the river to-morrow. Excursionists will have an hour and a half at Clayton, and one hour at the park. These trips are unequalled. The steamer will leave here. at 1:30 and be back early, Tickets 25c.
