BROADBRIM'S LETTER.

IT TOUCHES UPON SOME OF THE QUESTIONS OF THE HOUR.

The Sharp Trial and the Lesson It Teaches—Advice to Young Men—The Professions That Bring the Most Money—A Word About the Wheat-Pit, the Coffee-Pit, and the Other Pit.

NEW YORK, June 30.—I think that it was Daniel O'Connell who remarked once, that "No act of parliament was ever framed through which he could not drive a coach and four," and after the decision of the supreme court this week it is tolerably evident that there is a pretty large fracture in our excise law. Mayor Hewitt is nothing if not a strict constructionist, and several weeks ago he called in question the right of hotel-keepers to supply the water of life and other toothsome and exhilarating liquids to their guests on Sundays. That the authority to sell liquors on Sunday by innkeepers, otherwise known as hotel-keepers, had been strained to its uttermost limits is beyond question. In some instances three or four cheap cots were stored in a room with a couple of dirty blankets, and the ability to afford lodgings for a half dozen tramps constituted an inn. And, of course, this included free drinks for all the policemen on the beat. At the Hoffman House, the Gilsey, the Brunswick or the Fifth Avenue, men ordered a cracker and cheese, and with them several rounds of brandy and water or whiskey straight. The open manner in which this was done became a public scandal, and at last Mayor Hewitt was appealed to. He consulted the corporation counsel, and, in the plenitude of his legal wisdom, the corporation counsel opined that it was entirely in defiance of law. In this dilemma Captain Alexander Williams came to the front, and a conspiracy was formed to make a test case. Everybody in the city knows Captain Williams, and this officer of the law on the Sabbath day goes into a hotel and orders liquor, and gets it, and drinks it, knowing at the same time that he is breaking the law. He then turns around and swears out a warrant for the arrest of the hotel-keeper, who stood by while he took his drink, and the case is tried by Judge Lawrence in chambers. The language of the act is clear as daylight, and it is substantially this: That no one, holding a license for the sale of spirituous liquors, shall, on the Sabbath day, either sell or give the same away. No exception is made for any class of sellers, hotel-keepers or others. All are included in the act, and Judge Lawrence so decided. The case was appealed this week to a full bench, and the decision of Judge Lawrence was reversed. A shout went up when the decision reached us on Friday night, but by some hitch it was not received by the police authorities till late on Saturday night, and on Sunday the bottles again appeared on hotel tables, and the landlords and guests were happy. The experience of the past two Sundays will not soon be forgotten. There was weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth when the temperance cyclone first struck us, and now the hotel-keepers talk of holding a monster jubilee on the return to the ways of our fathers.

The theaters are closed and the churches are about to close, the examinations are past and the schools shut their doors. To the thousands of young men who have graduated and are casting about in search of an honorable profession I should unhesitatingly say, choose the diamond field or the prize ring. Both of these admirable professions open the way to honor and to wealth.

We have in this city a number of great journals. They go into every family, and any morning in the week you can learn how Carney smashed Mitchell all to pieces, or Dempsey knocked spots out of Jack McAuliffe, or Billy the Kid knocked the Spider sky high, and for fear that some of the interesting details might be lost to you, each round is minutely described, till at last one of the brutes is knocked all in a heap and left for dead upon the ground. The sporting editor and reporter are exceedingly well paid men, and rank infinitely above the man who reports a sermon or the doings of a philosophical society. The superintendent of public instruction, having charge of thousands of our children with immortal souls in his keeping, is the envy of his fellows, on a salary of three or four thousand dollars a year. A decent batter or catcher in a base ball team would laugh at you for such an offer, and the purchase of one by a western club cost the club more money than is paid to any minister in the United States, and this did not include his yearly salary. I attended a ball match the other day, and I never saw greater honor paid to mortal man than was paid to a lucky catcher who could scarcely write his name.

A few weeks since a prize fighting brute came here from England looking for a fight. Since his arrival he has pounded several men, almost to death. That he did not completely murder them was not the fault of Mr. Carney. He did the best he could, and now, after a short sojourn, he returns to his native land, which is Ireland, his pocket well stuffed out with good American bank notes, having earned during his short stay more money than was paid to the president of the United States in the same time. Who were the men who furnished the cash? Brutes like Carney himself! Oh, no! but fine gentlemen, who could afford to pay fifty dollars a ticket for the sport. But the wheat pit and the coffee pit have caught some of these fine patrons of the dog pit and the man pit, and it almost makes me feel bad, the growing unbelief in that other pit, where fine gentlemen who go to prize fights won't have to pay fifty dollars for a ticket, but will find their hats chalked—D.H.

Mr. Jake Sharp is convicted, and even if he escapes through some of the fine meshes of the law, he will never forget the experience of the past two weeks. Take a man at seventy, who has been revelling in wealth all his life—who has a palace to live in, horses, carriages, servants, everything that the heart of man can desire—who could say to one, "Go, and be gone," and to another "Come, and be cometh"—the man who was in a position to scatter a million of dollars without question. After the enjoyment of all these things, lock him up in jail, and even death would be a relief. Up to this time Mr. Sharp enjoyed many privileges not accorded to ordinary criminals. At first he was allowed to remain in his own house, in charge of deputy-sheriffs. Then when he was confined in Ludlow street jail he rode to and from the court in his own private carriage instead of being sent in the "Black Maria." In Ludlow street jail he had the most elegant apartment in the prison, the same occupied by Tweed and Ferdinand Ward. This brings the sheriff's deputy fifty dollars a week, to which are attached little perquisites, which will raise it to a hundred—not a bad thing for the deputy. The district attorney says that he has information of a plot for Sharp's escape. At any rate he rides no more in his own carriage, and his family is not allowed to remain with him in prison, so that his punishment has actually commenced. He has lost his old-time "What are you going to do about it?" defiant air, and he looks like a man thoroughly broken down and heartsick. If he had ever dreamed of his present pitiable plight he would have put the Canadian boundary between himself and his pursuers. But his faith in the evil power of money misled him. He had found it all potent up to a certain point. He had bought judges and jurors, legislatures and boards of aldermen, and why could he not buy his way out now? The end is not yet, but the signs are full of evil for him. Inside the walls of Sing Sing would be a sad ending to life for Jacob Sharp. But if his evil example of corruption and success ending in misery, failure and disgrace, shall arrest one young man who has chosen the wrong road, and who thinks that the accumulation of wealth is the only end of man, Mr. Sharp will not have suffered in vain.

This week has had its lesson as well as the last. No blacker Friday has been seen for ten years. Manhattan off thirty points, and lots of other stocks in sympathy. As a rule margins are only ten per cent. How many of these were swept away on Friday! Hundreds rushed in to bolster up the market, and put up another ten per cent. That went, and up went another, and when that was exhausted they felt sad and gave up. The outsiders sold, and the insiders, Jay Gould, Russell Sage, Cyrus Field and their crowd, bought, and in a little time Manhattan and all the rest of the stocks will be back at the old figure.—BROADBRIM.

BASE BALL MATCHES.

A Knock out at Belleville—The way the League Teddies Stand.

The Kingston base ball team had hard luck at Belleville yesterday. They played the local team in the presence of a great audience. They were treated well, in fact all possible courtesy was shown to them. At the end of the third innings, notwithstanding the work of a Buffalo battery, the Kingstons were leading by three to one, when Barnfather was knocked out. He was batting when the ball struck him on the back of the head, knocking him senseless. He had to be retired. W. Carson took his place and with Allen and Trainer as the battery there was no hope of winning. The Bellevilles took the match by a score of 24 to 7. Barnfather is in condition to play to-day.

A base ball match was played this afternoon between the wood-workers and iron-workers of the car works.

On the same occasion Miss Ellen, second daughter of Francis Murphy, North Adams, Mass., received the holy habit of the order. The ceremonies were performed by the Right Rev. ### Dropping the Purchase Clause.

LONDON, July 2.—In the house of lords last night Lord Salisbury moved the omission of the purchase clauses on the ground that they were irrelevant to the main object of the Land bill, and likely to lead to extended discussion in the house of commons and prove inimical to the passage of the bill. ### AN END OF THE CAMP.

LIEUT.-COL. BOUTON PUTS ON RECORD HIS OPINION OF IT.

The Competition For the Gowski Shift—As Good as Ordnance Shifting as it Shooting—The Departure of the Troops Most of Them Got Away Last Night—The Field Deserted To-day.

A sham-battle was not engaged in by the troops on Barriefield common yesterday morning.

But their movements were just as interesting and pleased the spectators just as well as a mock-battle would have done.

The weather was oppressively warm and the mercury must have danced in the vicinity of the nineties.

The audience (3,000 strong) felt severely the red-hot rays which the sun shot towards this sphere.

A review on a grand scale, designed by Col. Boulton and his staff, occurred. All the troops in camp, the 14th battalion, and the veterans of the city who did duty for their country in 1866-70, were present.

The proceedings were not commenced until the arrival of the veterans and the 14th battalion shortly after 11 o'clock. When these appeared great was the applause that followed. The rifles were headed by their own band, and the Orange Young Britons' file and drum organization preceded the veterans.

The brigade formed up in quarter-column, and afterwards moved into line. They faced the east, and were in command of Col. Boulton, Lt. Col. Cubitt acting as brigadier of the infantry. The order of the corps were: Cavalry, "A" battery division, and Kingston field battery on the right, and on the left the 40th, 45th, 46th, 14th battalions, and veteran corps. On the extreme left stood the Durham and Gananoque field batteries. The batteries fired blank ammunition twenty-one times, and the infantry a feu de joie. The firing of the infantry, excepting that of the 14th battalion, was very irregular. The way the rifles did their work in this exercise was indeed creditable. Several times the soldiers gave hearty cheers for the queen, and the bands played the national anthem. The brigade was reformed, cavalry and batteries on the right and infantry on the left. In open column the brigade marched past. For this movement too much praise cannot be given the rifles and the veterans. They marched by the saluting base very solidly. No fault could be found with their lines. They marched evenly and kept splendid time. The spectators evidenced their appreciation by hearty applause.

The other infantry corps marched fairly well. After the cavalry and batteries had trotted past Col. Boulton called the commanding officers together and complimented them upon the soldierly way in which their respective corps had behaved. The camp troops then proceeded to their headquarters, and the 14th battalion and veterans to the city.

A Commandant's Farewell Words.

In the brigade order book the reporter found the following remarks: "Lieut.-Col. Boulton on this, his last order before the breaking up of camp, congratulates the force under his command, from the commanding officers to the rank and file inclusive, upon the proficiency attained by them in their short course of instruction. Comparing the past with the present
