HOW A FRISKY PONY RAN AWAY WITH A LITTLE PAPOOSE.

An Interesting Game That May be Played with Pebbles—Historical Stories About Domestic Cats, Including the One About Dante and His Pet.

History assures us that the cat has been esteemed from remote ages. In most eastern countries cats have been great favorites. So much were these animals venerated by the Egyptians, their bodies were embalmed when they died and placed in niches of the catacombs. Numbered with well known stories illustrative of the Egyptians' love and veneration of cats is the one told of Cambyse, king of the Medes and Persians, who lived 529 years before Christ. This king when he led his army against the Egyptians, is said, gave to each of his soldiers a live cat to hold before him instead of a shield, and the Egyptian yielded to the conqueror rather than injure their much loved animals.

Instances are on record where cats have been taught to perform useful offices to man. A notable one is that of Dante and his cat. It is told that Dante taught his animal to hold a candle in its paw for him while he read, and that he was very proud of his success in making the cat subservient to his will in the manner described.

A TORTOISE SHELL CAT.

In England cats are such great favorites that cat shows are held every year at the Crystal Palace, where all sorts of fancy breeds are exhibited. In our own country the tortoise shell cat is perhaps the most popular of all breeds. We have also beautiful Maltese cats, also Angora cats with long silvery hair; then there are cats of the Persian breed, with soft glossy fur, white underneath and gray on the back. To these may be added quite a list of mixed breeds, some of which are not only beautiful to look at, but exceedingly useful in their legitimate pursuits after mice.

An English Game.

An English exchange describes a game played by English boys and girls: A little heap of pebbles is piled up in a certain spot on the lawn. Each person is led, in turn, to a certain distance from the heap, blindfolded, given a stick, turned round three times and then told to start off and do his best to beat down the little heap of stones. It is delicious to see the solemn air of some of the performers, and to watch the vigor with which they pound away at nothing, whole yards off the place where the stones are. No matter how you may fix their exact position in your eye, and pace it out before you are blindfolded, you are certain to go wide of it. It is an odd thing, but a true one.

Vortex Smoke Rings.

Amateur chemists may amuse themselves as well as entertain their friends by producing vortex smoke rings. All the apparatus required to produce this effect is an empty cigar box, one of the ends of which, being removed, is replaced by canvas tightly nailed round it. A circular hole about one inch in diameter is bored in the opposite end; inside the box is a saucer half filled with carbonate of ammonia, upon which sufficient hydrochloric acid is poured until a dense vapor of ammonia chloride fills the box, which, upon slight, rapid pressure upon the canvas end of the box, is ejected from the hole, and assumes beautiful circles of white smoke, which ascend and retain their shape till dissipated.

An Indian Baby's Perilous Ride.

Numbered with other curious scenes in the region of the Rocky mountains are the ones in which figure Apache mothers and their babes. When walking a squaw carries her babe in a little basket, strapped to her back, as seen in the picture.

AN APACHE MOTHER AND CHILD.

The baskets are of the regular Indian style and the poor papooses are laced into them tight and snug. Some squaws, when they stop to rest, remove the basket and its live burden from their backs and hang it to the saddle horn, because if left on the ground the dogs go around and lick the babies' faces, which the little ones do not enjoy.

A San Francisco correspondent tells the following story: "One rather frisky pony, with a baby on the horn of a saddle, wanders from the rest and is immediately surrounded by a crowd of dogs. Their barking starts him so trot, and with a shriek the mother rushes from her place in the line to catch him. But the pony doesn't want to be caught, and from a trot turns to a run, and away he goes—the basket flapping on his side only making him run the harder. Finally the strap that holds the basket breaks—down comes baby, thump, to the ground, face down, and the pony, after running a few more rods, is caught by a boy, while the distracted mother picks up her unfortunate infant, and immediately unlacing the deerskin cover, takes it out to assure herself it is sound in body after its rather risky ride and fall."

Little Toys of Little Boys.

"By and by" is a very bad boy: Shins him at once and forever; For they who loved with "By and by" Soon come to the house of "Never."

"Oxy" is a mean little coward, A boy that is half of a man; Set on him a plucky wee terror: That the world knows and honors—"I Can."

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

Dr. Edson on Candy and Chewing Gum.

Sea Sickness, Asthma and Other Ills. Dr. Cyrus Edson, of the New York health Department, is reported as stating that it is safe to eat candy in New York nowadays. Once in a great while some cheap little manufacturer on a side street is caught coloring his candy with chromate of lead, but the great mass of candy is harmless sugar. Contrary also to the belief of many good people who apparently think that anything people take a notion to is a deadly drug, or at least harmful, Dr. Edson holds that the practice of chewing gum, especially before and after meals, is an excellent one. It increases the flow of saliva and aids the digestion, and there is no danger of adulteration. Gum is gum, and not to swallow, but to chew.

Relief for Tender and Painful Feet.

If the feet are tender and painful after long standing or walking great relief is said to be obtainable by bathing them in warm salt and water. A handful of salt to a gallon of water as warm as can be borne is the proper proportion. The feet should be immersed and the water thrown over them with the hand, and also over the legs as far as the knees. When the water becomes too cool, dry the feet and legs, rubbing with a coarse towel upward. Neuralgia of the feet has been cured by perseverance in this method, night and morning. It is also said that persons with weak lungs or bronchia, as well as weak throats, are wonderfully benefited by gargling every morning with strong salt and water.

Blackheads and Other Blemishes.

Blackheads and similar blemishes on the skin can be greatly alleviated and oftentimes cured, by keeping it in a clean and healthy condition. Many physicians recommend that the face be washed daily with some pure soap, and the use of a flesh brush on other parts of the body. Good results have come from washing the face in the morning with old castile soap and anointing it in the evening with cream, in which a little sulphur has been mixed. A vigorous application of the flesh brush or crash towel between the shoulders will also be found efficacious.

Remedy for the Poison Rhus (Oak).

It is a well known fact that rhus affects different persons in different degrees and some not at all. It is also well known that one victim of the poison often experiences greater relief than another while using a similar remedy. A strong solution of bicarbonate of soda, as a rule, proves an efficient application for the cure of rhus poisoning. There are, however, exceptions to the rule. A correspondent in Gardeners' Monthly writes that bicarbonate of soda fails in his case, but he finds relief in the application of a strong saturated solution of alum.

One View of Sea Sickness.

A physician who for over six years has made a careful trial of all the so called specifics for sea sickness entertains little doubt that in a large majority of cases the imagination is the source of trouble. For instance, he has, on several occasions, seen ladies suffering from sea sickness before the ship had left its moorings in the docks, where there is not the slightest motion. Iced stimulants and the recumbent posture are the remedies he now employs.

How to Take Medicine.

Elizabeth R. Schofield tells how to take medicine as follows: Bitter tonics, such as quinine, should be taken half an hour before meals; iron, oils and acids, after meals; that they may be digested with the food. Iodide of potassium is always given after meals; it is said to be less liable than to disorder digestion.

Efficient Formula for Asthma.

In the treatment of asthma Dr. Cazzanave de la Roche has found iodide of potassium, associated with cow's milk, very efficient, and gives the following formula: Distilled water, a hundred and fifty grams; iodide of potassium, eight grams; one tablespoonful of the solution in a cup of milk, twice a day.

The Removal of Superfluous Hair.

The removal of superfluous hair from the skin is possible, both by means of depilatories and by electricity. The former are mostly preparations of sulphide of barium or sulphide of calcium, and the process by electricity is very slow, each hair root having to be killed separately.

Nature Makes no Mistake.

Nature's own remedy for bowel complaints, cholera morbus, cholera, cramps, vomiting, sea-sickness, cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery, and all diseases of a like nature belonging to the summer season, is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which can be obtained of all dealers in medicine.

Ely's Cream Balm cured me of Catarrh of many years standing, restored my sense of smell. For colds in the head it works like magic. E. H. SHERWOOD, National State Bank, Elizabeth, N. J. The Roufrew bakers have combined to raise the price of a 4lb. loaf of bread from 10c. to 12c. They claim the raise in flour compels this.
