TRAVELER'S CASE IN WHICH TO CARRY UMBRELLAS AND GANES.

New Fans of Feathers, Gilt Paper and Hand Painted Crepe - "Manhattan," "Rover" and Other Bathing Costumes. for Ladies and Children.

The popular materials for bathing suits are plain flannel, serge flannel, and the more wiry worsted serge, in plain navy blue, cream white, or with stripes of contrasting colors. The striped goods is usually employed for the skirt or tunie, and the blouse is of plain blue trimmed with red braid or with bands of the striped material.

BATHING SUITS.

A favorite style has a blouse mounted in plaits or gathered upon a yoke, the neck finished with a sailor collar and the sleeves short. The tunic or skirt is plaited or gathered to correspond with the blouse, and reaches just below the knees, and the drawers are wide, and are either entirely concealed by the skirt or show a trifle below it. Sometimes the neck is cut out in heart shape, and a chemisette is inserted, like in a boy's sailor suit. Blue suits are trimmed with black, light blue, or red. White suits are trimmed with white braid, but there may be a chemisette or a sailor collar of dark blue.

Fig. 1 in the cut shows a lady's suit called the "Manhattan." It is made of blue serge flannel, trimmed with narrow white braid. The suit consists of a blouse waist, skirt and trousers. The trousers and blouse waist can be joined in one garment and the skirt made separately and buttoned on, which is the most convenient and comfortable way; or the waist and the skirt can be joined together. The waist has a yoke at the back and the collar is a sailor shape.

The child's suit (in same cut) is known as the "Royer," and is also made of blue flannel, and trimmed with bias bands of striped red and blue flannel. The waist has about the same fullness in the back as in front, and is finished with a sailor collar. The design is suitable for either a boy or a girl. Girls unfler 6 or 8 years seldom wear skirts; but, if preferred, a short skirt made either of straight breadths or after a gored skirt pattern, can be added.

Bathing robes are in peignoir shape, full at the neck, with wide square sleeves, or in circle shape, which gathers at the back of the neck. These are finished with a collar, and are made of Turkish toweling and trimmed with gay colored bands. The imported suits, says Demorest's Monthly, which furnishes the above models, are too ultra in design to become popular here.

Some of the New Fans.

Feather fans are in high favor, especially those composed of estrich feathers, marabout and curled swan's feathers. Very attractive fans are oval shaped ones, covered with a mixture of ostrich tips and marabout, with butterflies here and there. Transparent fans represent a popular style, and are made sometimes of gauge and sometimes of lace. Coming to cheaper sorts, there is a large variety of Japanese and Chinese fans.

Following are fans described by The Domestic Monthly: Pekin fans of mottled gilt paper are mounted upon slender red reeds, or plain paper designs are laced with fine silk cords up each long mount, with sticks of shining lacquer. A black gause fan has a large spider's web in silver; another one has a flight of sprites in pale shades of silver and gray, the foremost one carrying a torch, from which stream red and golden rays.

Shell handles on the large feather designs are especially attractive and expensive, with the monograms set in goal.

Designs painted to order show the name in flowers across the spread, as tiny roses, violets or daisies, with the duplicate in diminished form on one of the outside sticks. Crepe is a beautiful background for water colors, but is so frail as to require the best of Traveler's Umbrella Case.

Numbered with other conveniences that may be made at home for travelers is a case for carrying umbrellas and canes on a journey. A case like the model may be made of a piece of beige colored linen, 19 inches wide above, 4% below and 30 inches deep. A drawing hem with heading is made at the lower end of the case while 234 inches from the upper edge a piece of scarlet ribbon, put through eyelet holes, gives the close. The loop for hanging over the arm is also of the same ribbon. This case can be decorated by embroidering worked with crewel wool and silk Everybody knows how unpleasant it is at times to carry an umbrella without a case of some kind. It is difficult as well to carry a fine cane so it will not be marred. Elas- tics are always the elastics are perfect, to keep the umbrella so wrapped that it does not look baggy. The cheap cases bought with the umbrellas and canes soon rip, or they are so worthless that one new tr thinks of PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

A Physician Expresses Himself on the Subject of Baldness.

Dr. A. H. P. Leuf calls attention, in The Medical News, to some erroneous impressions in regard to that organ on which depends so much of the pleasure and the pain of existence, viz., the stomach. He finds, as a result of many examinations, that the stomach in its normal position is vertical, instead of lying in a horizontal position.

Again, when water is taken into the full or partly full stomach it does not mingle with the food, as we are generally taught, but passes along quickly between the food and the lesser curvature, towards the pylorus, through which it passes into the intestine. The secretion of mucus by the lining membrane is constant, and during the night a considerable amount accumulates in the stomach: some of its liquid portion is absorbed, and that which remains is thick and tenacious. If food is taken into the stomach when in this condition, it becomes coated with this mucus, and the secretion of the gastric juice and its action are delayed. These facts show the value of a goblet of water before breakfast. This washes out the tenacious mucus, and stimulates the gastric glands to secretion. In old or feeble persons, water should not be taken cold, but it may be with great advantage then taken warm or hot. This removal of the accumulated mucus from the stomach. is probably one of the reasons why taking soup at the beginning of a meal has always been found so beneficial.

Finally, Dr. Leuf concludes that it is perfectly proper to drink water before, during and after meals.

Carbolized Oil for Cuts, Etc.

An excellent household remedy for slight cuts, or even for more serious injuries, is found in carbolized oil, which can be procured from the druggist or may be made, says Good Housekeeping, by adding one teaspoonful of carbolic acid, crystals dissolved in glycerine, to fourteen teaspoonfuls of sweet oil. It is spread on a piace of linen and bound on the wound. Carbolic acid, being an antiseptic, prevents decomposition and so permits the wound to heal. The air is full of minute germs, invisible to the naked eye. It is the office of these germs when life ceases in any organization to turn it again into its original elements. Fermentation, as in yeast, and souring is the beginning of their work. When the skin is broken the vitality of the surrounding parts being destroyed by the injury, a hotbed is prepared in which bacteria flourish with fatal rapidity. The poison thus generated is absorbed into the system and in bad cases the patient dies of pyæmia or blood poisoning.

Hygienic View of Baldness.

A physician recently expressed himself on the subject of bald heads, stating as his opinion, that bald headed people die sooner than those who have a good head of hair. In many cases they take cold easily and go off with pneumonia or contract consumption or chronic bronchitis. This doctor urges all bald headed men to wear a skull cap at all times, as wigs are unfashionable, contending that if the hair were not intended as a protection to man, he would have been created without any. He has noted many cases of pneumonia, and, where the patient is a male over 40 years old, the proportion is over onehalf in favor of being bald headed.

Bald heads are one of the signs of a state of civilization including ease, luxury and high living, but also point to physical degeneration of the race. Those who are bald should adopt the skull cap or other protection for the head.

A Suggestion to the Seasiek.

While investigating the cause of dizziness, Dr. William James, of Harvard college, has discovered that deaf mutes, as a class, possess a singular immunity from it. This he attributes to the destruction either of the auditory nerves or their labyrinthian termination. He also observed in deaf mutes signs of a possible immunity from seasickness. He makes the suggestion that this affection in an ordinary sufferer might be mitigated by blistering or otherwise counter irritating the skin around the ears.

Useful Hints.

Professor A. J. Cook finds ammonia the best of all remedies for bee stings.

Too much tennis, says a noted physician, will undoubtedly cause the maidens spinal trouble

The yolk of one egg, three drams of glycerine and fifteen grains of carbolic acid make an excellent mixture for softening the hands.

English ladies are celebrated for their beautiful complexions. They pay strict attention to cleanliness and the bath and take much active exercise in the open air.

Try and be Cured.

Lame back and nervous debility, associated with rheumatism, is sometimes met with in every day life, but as a rule we find not more than two of these complaints in the same party. Be this as it may. The only sure and perfect cure is electricity and the best form of administering it is by Norman's electric belts and insoles. W. J. Wilson is agent, and from him you can procure testimonials and circulars relating to any of your complaints.

In Better Humour Now.

"My son, aged eleven, was cured of an eruptive humor that covered his head and face with sores, by two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and Pills," testifies Mrs. Mary Fulford, of Port Hope, Ont.

Regatta On the Paramatta,

J. A. St. John has received a letter from Beach's backer, in which the latter states he intends to get up a big regatta, to take place on the Paramatta next fall, and that he wants all the American scullers to take part. He says nothing, however, in reply to Mr. St. John's offer, sent some time ago, for a match race between Gaudaur and Beach.

"It always acted like magic. I had scarcely ever need to give the second dose of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for summer complaints," Mrs. Walter Govenlock, of Ethel, Ont.
