UNPLEASANT REFERENCES. It is said that during the consideration of certain matters affecting the welfare of the Canada Pacific railway by the parliament, at its last session, the private secretary to Hon. J. J. C. Abbott circulated circular-letters to the effect that the recipients of them had been omitted from the list of those entitled to passes on the railway, and that through the writer they would be handed the same from Mr. Van Horne. It is sincerely to be regretted that there is not a law in Canada, as in the United States, making it illegal to distribute passes, especially to those who are allowed mileage and handsomely paid for attending to their public duties. The ostentatious display of passes under the circumstances referred to above is suggestive of conclusions the reverse of complimentary.

FACT AND THEORY. Our esteemed contemporary, the Peterboro Review, is worried by most extraordinary views of coal importation. Having found fault with the government because it abandoned the duty on coal the WHIG asked, Is the Review, then, satisfied that our people have paid the same? To this enquiry it has replied in these original terms: We have always been certain, and have always expressed the opinion, that our people did not pay the coal duty but that the Pennsylvania coal ring did pay it. We formed that opinion not on theory but on facts and figures, which showed that a sufficient price was made for Canada at a sufficient reduction to cover the duty, which was paid by the coal owners not by the Canadian consumers.

We ventured to predict, amid the jeers of reform journals, including the WHIG, that the Pennsylvania coal ring, when the duty was repealed, would raise their prices for Canada and pocket the half million dollars by ceasing to allow it to our importers. The event has proved us correct. At Montreal, Ottawa, and other places they are raging because they find that the price of coal instead of being lowered by the amount of the duty has remained as high as before. They relied upon free trade theory instead of upon facts, and were of course disappointed.

As to the WHIG's assertion that "we must use the American anthracite coal at any price and without regard to the tariffs," it is altogether erroneous. It was because the Pennsylvania coal ring knew that we could and would use Nova Scotia bituminous coal and coke in place of anthracite, if a special inducement was not given to use the anthracite, that these monopolists paid the duty rather than leave the field to the Nova Scotians.

That the Review has always contended the miners paid the duty on the coal they sold into Canada does not by any means dispose of the case. The better-informed people of Canada contend differently, including the coal merchants, tory and liberal, and Sir Charles Tupper himself, who, in his budget speech, made a shocking wreck of the Review's pet theory. If any evidence were desired to add to the demolition of the Review's arguments it were supplied by itself. An increase in the price of coal did follow the abolition of the Canadian duty, but it affected the United States as well as Canada, and the "kicking" against it is as violent in any of the American as it is the Canadian cities. It is not the "free trade," but the alleged "fair trade" theories that have led to disappointment.

Finally the WHIG repeats that Canada, at least this part of it, must use the American anthracite coal at any price, simply because the Nova Scotian bituminous coal is no substitute and cannot be made such. The Pennsylvania miners never concerned themselves about a competition which has not, and cannot, exist under the present condition of things.

M'DOUGALL—CLIMOW.

Hon. William McDougall has been a power in the press, and has been able to hold his own with any opponent. Though he has been living in comparative quiet in recent years he has not slumbered, as a recent letter to the Ottawa Free Press fully indicates. He was the first employer of Mr. Wiman, (in journalism), is his friend now, and when the great advocate of commercial union was attacked, and unfairly attacked, by Senator Climow, at the capital, in his 12th July speech, Mr. McDougall went in pursuit of him with serious results. In his correspondence he observes: "Mr. Clemow in the course of his speech said: 'They had another kind of a man who had disturbed the elements in this country, a man named Wiman, who endeavored to persuade the people that they would be better under the stars and stripes than they had been under the glorious flag of Great Britain. It showed him (Climow) that there was a regular and systematic combination for the purpose of dismembering the empire."

"With all due respect to Senator Clemow let me inform him, through your columns, that he has grossly misrepresented and wantonly slandered a native-born British subject, who has proved his loyalty to his country. Let him ask Sir John Macdonald who it was that detected and exposed the real authors of the late rebellion? Let him ask further why the chief conspirator, a quoniam tory, was permitted to escape, and why his demented dupes Riel was ignominiously hanged? When he has made himself as well acquainted with the facts on the first point, as we know he is in respect to the last, he will probably withdraw his indictment against Mr. Wiman.

"But what is the occasion of Senator Clemow's outburst of loyal wrath. "Mr. Wiman visited his native country in the neighborhood of Orangeville a few days ago, at the invitation of many farmers, merchants and other friends of his youth, and was invited to speak to them on the subject of reciprocal trade with the United States. Hon. Mr. Butterworth, a member of congress, who introduced last session a bill empowering the United States government to enter into negotiations with the government of Canada for a new treaty of reciprocity, accompanied him. They both addressed the people who had invited them, and their speeches have been published and read by more loyal Canadians than will ever probably have an opportunity of reading any speech of the super-loyal senator. I heard (and have also read the reports of) these speeches. I deny that either of the gentlemen said, or hinted, much less tried to persuade the people that they would be better under the stars and stripes."

"It would seem that Mr. Clemow gauged the intelligence of his audience at a very low standard when he imagined they could not comprehend the difference between commercial reciprocity and "dismemberment of the empire." The Orangemen of Canada, as a class, are not so ignorant as the senator would have us believe. "They probably place as much confidence in the loyalty of Brother Sir John A. Macdonald as in that of Brother Clemow. The honorable gentleman has no doubt been too much occupied since his elevation to the senate, with railway speculations in the North-West, to read the voluminous "Hansards" of the commons. I will, therefore, quote for his information the opinion of the first minister of the crown on the measure recommended by Mr. Wiman. In his speech on the address in the session of 1885, Sir John Macdonald said: "Mr. Speaker, the public men of the United States, from the president down, know that Canada has already been ready to enter into negotiations for a reciprocity treaty. They know that upon our statute book there is a provision that in case the Americans at any time choose to enter into negotiations with us, the government are empowered by the parliament of Canada without a new act, without any legislation whatever, to reduce the tariff or wipe away the duties altogether on condition that the Americans reciprocate."

"Mr. Clemow is a novus homo in legislation and in the field of political economy and international equivalents, but he is not too old to learn. I respectfully recommend him to consult the 'Old Man,' and also Hansard before he again attacks Mr. Wiman or lets of his 12th of July fireworks. If not, some friends of his may be hurt by the explosion.

Mr. Clemow having subsequently expressed an anxiety to obtain the name of the quoniam tory, referred to as the chief conspirator in the late rebellion," Mr. M. Dougall said:

"He can obtain that information from his friend Sir John, to whom I referred him. The important details furnished by Mr. Wiman of the attempts of the 'conspirator' referred to in New York and Washington, to raise the sinews of war, months before the outbreak on the Saskatchewan, were promptly communicated to the premier. If he has mislaid the report, and authorizes me give Mr. Clemow a copy, I shall be happy to oblige him."

Mr. McDougall came into prominence as a journalist, and for many years did editorial work. It will be apparent from the above that his right hand has not lost its cunning. He writes powerfully, as one like him must do when he knows what he is talking about.

SODA AND WHISKEY.

A Druggist Up Before the Magistrate—One Side of the Case is Given.

A druggist was before the court this morning for selling liquor without a license. The information was withdrawn, another to be substituted in its place. The inspector had no other way of laying the information than in the harsh terms expressed. Mr. McIntyre asked that the charge be dismissed, but the magistrate refused. He said he knew the great difficulties attending the inspector's work, and he would give him all possible latitude. "Well, then, I give notice," said Mr. McIntyre, "that I will not allow any information to be laid against my client beyond July 15th. The inspector has had the chance to prove anything prior to that date and has refused." The magistrate said that that matter could be decided later.

The inspector received an anonymous letter to-day giving more information that he had previously known. The druggist called to-day and said he had a soda fountain and on the top of it a bottle of Moxie Nerve Food, a substance that some people had put in with their syrups. Some time ago the inspector visited the store, enquired if liquor were dispensed with the soda-water, and was told it was not. "What have you in that black bottle," enquired the inspector, pointing to the glass on top of the fountain. The bottle was handed to him and inspected, and the offer made that he could have it analyzed if he desired. Nothing further was said. The next thing the druggist knew was the receipt of a summons. He positively asserts that no liquor is dispensed with soda.
