GOTHAM'S PARKS.

THEY COVER 1,197 ACRES, BUT MORE IS NEEDED.

For This Reason the Park Board Has Decided to Increase the Number of Small Parks in the Metropolis by Six. Some of the Present Parks.

Excluding the little triangles left by the intersection of streets at acute angles and the few open courts where the city has fenced in a plot of shrubs—in short, excluding all such tracts less than an acre in size—New York city has less than 1,300 acres of park. Of these the noted Central park contains 843 acres and all the others but 354, or 1,197 acres altogether. So the authorities have decided to create six new parks as soon as the ground can be obtained. And there is the rub. Land on Manhattan Island is a monopoly—indeed, the most thorough monopoly in the world—as the city cannot grow in any direction for water boundaries, and demand for land steadily increases. So every foot secured for park purposes would be at the cost of more dollars than would cover it.

Central park has more than twice the area of all the others. Their size is as follows: Riverside, park and drive, 173 acres; Morningside, 31; High Bridge, 23; Battery, 21; Mount Morris, 30; Manhattan square, 19; Tompkins square, 10; Washington and City Hall, 8 each; Madison square, 7; Bryant and Fourth avenue, 5 each, and East River, Stuyvesant and Union, 4 acres each. All the little triangles, as aforesaid, contain less than an acre each, and most of them but a few rods. And, despite the fine and impressive array above, one may toil or tramp for hours in thickly settled sections of the city and not see a break in the solid masses of brick, stone and mortar, especially on the east side.

But the park commissioners resolved at their last meeting to open six new parks at least, and now the matter awaits the action of the board of street openings, whose function it is under the law to locate the park, "condemn" the property for public purposes and obtain title to it. So far this board has made but two selections, all on the west side of the city, so the inference is that they will make twice as many on the east side, where the need is more than twice as great. The places selected are only such as could be thrown open to the public with very little delay. In the meantime labor is progressing rapidly on the great aqueduct and tunnel, which is to more than double the present water supply of the city. Unlike the Croton aqueduct, the new conduit's course is far under ground nearly all the way, in places 300 feet below the surface, and most of the way in solid rock; the leakage, therefore, will be almost nothing, and when completed the water supply will suffice for a city three times the size of New York. Then the fountains will play.

Do Not Eat Raw Eggs.

In the Monatschrift zum Schutz der Vogelwelt, Professor Liebe adduces reliable data in answer to the question whether living worms are to be found in hen's eggs. A short time previously his sister had found a round, thread like worm, the length of a little finger, in the white of an egg. It moved itself in a very lively manner. She at once took the white of the egg to a druggist, who put the worm in alcohol. Professor Liebe, of Kiel, decided that the specimen was an example of the thread worm of fowls—Heterakis infusa—often found in the small intestines of the domestic hen. Only a few instances of the existence of the same in the white of the egg have been recorded.—Allgemeine Medicinische Central-Zeitung.

BASEBALL.

Rochester is after Hardie Henderson, of the Brooklyn.

Jersey City will play Brown, late of the Bridgeports.

The Detroit team is remarkable for its heavy batting.

A hospital for injured and maimed ball players is proposed.

Slattery, of the Torontos, has the best fielding average of his team.

Forty games in the International league have been won by a single run.

Miller, the Pittsburgh's catcher, is spoken of as the hardest worked catcher in the league.

Clarkson, after pitching eleven consecutive games, lost the twelfth to the Washingtons.

New York boasts the most impartial spectators of ball games of any city in the country.

Whenever anything ails a ball player this year they call it "Charley horse." "Tom and Jerry horse" would fit many cases.

Anson, of Chicago; Comiskey, of St. Louis; Spence, of Portland, and Rowe, of Kansas City, own stock in their respective organizations.

A. G. Spalding, ruler of the Chicago club, is said to have done more than any other person to break up intemperance on the part of ball players.

Manager Phillips, of the Pittsburghs, hopes that two things will be done next session: First, to abolish the base hit for a base on balls, and second, to lower the number of strikes to three.

Manager Gaffney is quoted by an Indianapolis paper as saying that "if President Young should travel about, letting his presence be unknown, and see the games umpired, every member of the staff of umpires, except Doescher, would immediately receive his release."

Manager Alexander, of St. Joe, Mo., offered $150 per month to pitcher Neal, of Louisville. Neal wired: "Do you think I am a farmer? If you will pay $500 a month and allow me to manage the team I will come. Answer quick." Alexander telegraphed that $150 was all American association "chestnuts" were worth.

Davidson, first baseman of Amherst, leads the Intercollegiate league in fielding, having an average of 1,000, playing in twelve games. This has never been equaled before, except by "Sam" Childs, Yale '84, who played ten games. Davidson is a very tall youth, standing six feet three inches in his stocking feet.

Umpire Powers' right shoulder is black and blue from the contusion inflicted by pitched balls. He says that scarcely a game takes place in which the umpire does not receive several painful blows. There's a necessity for an umpire's breast protector that will protect the shoulders, while the legs should be provided with pads.

FROM THE KENNELS.

The American Kennel stud book will be published next week.

The bench show will be held at the Danbury (Conn.) annual fair, in October.

Mr. F. Hoey's fox terrier Valet won prizes at the jubilee bench show in England.

Stafford Springs, Conn., will have a two days' show in connection with the annual fair.

The American Fox Terrier club will hold its second bench show of fox terriers at Newport on Sept. 7 and 8.

The New Jersey Kennel club will give a bench show at Waverly during the state fair next September.

Mr. E. W. Clark, of Philadelphia, has lost the Irish setter Blarney. He either strayed from the kennel or has been stolen.

Mr. August Belmont, Jr.'s, fox terriers Lucifer, Diadem, Bacchanal, Verdict and Tiara all distinguished themselves in the jubilee show.

Although the Graphic kennels made some large entries in the English jubilee show, they did not send any dogs over on account of an attack of distemper.

WORK OF THE ATHLETES.

J. McGregor, of the Brooklyn Athletic association, is a first class one mile runner.

J. F. Condon, of the American Athletic club, will try the quarter mile run all winter.

Jacob Schaefer and Maurice Vignaux meet in a fourteen inch balkline game at Paris, Oct. 10.

All the athletes have given up training until the heated term hides itself away. The tracks are now deserted.

Some people believe the English athletic team, which is coming to this country to compete in the championships, will be found wanting. It is a big mistake. To defeat the visitors our home product will have to do more than it ever did before.

Some one is responsible for the report that William Barnard, the billiard player, intends to challenge Orville Oddie, Jr., the winner of the Racquet club emblem, to a match championship. Barnard is a finished player, but he cannot hope to beat Oddie while the latter maintains his present fine form.

THE WHEELMEN.

The racing board has reinstated Thomas Stevens.

John Keen, the racing veteran, was married recently.

A great many tricyclists are turning to lawn tennis and baseball for a change.

F. M. Daniels is still ahead in the New York Bicycle club mtg., with James M. McFadden second and J. H. Hanson third.

Kidrien, the Dutch champion, rides a twenty-seven pound machine. He usually wears dancing pumps with bows while racing.

The Wheel would like to see some enterprising club give a race meeting on the road for cash prizes. This, it thinks, would show the fallacy and absurdity of the league's failure to recognize road racing, thus allowing amateurs and professionals to compete together.

Here down the river to morrow at 2 p.m.
