THE ANVIL AND THE BELLOWS. - A blacksmith who fancied himself sick, would often teaze a neighbouring physician to give him relief. The physician knew that he was perfectly well; but being unwilling to offend him, told him that he must be careful of his diet and not to eat anything heavy or windy. The blacksmith went off satisfied; but on revolving in his own mind what kind of food was heavy or windy, returned to the doctor, who having lost temper with his 33,000. patient, said, "don't you know what things are heavy and windy?" " No," said the blacksmith. Why, then, I,ll tell you," says the doctor. -Your anvil is heavy and your bellows are windy; don't eat either of these, and you will
