Mr EDITOR:-It was my privilege to be in the Wesleyan Methodist Chapel here last Sabbath evening to hear the Rev. Mr D. His text was these sublime words of the Saviour, "The foxes have holes, the birds of the air have nests. but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." The preacher set forth the destitute state of the Son of God while upon earth, with all that fervor for which he is so celebrated, to a crowded congregation, who were all attentive to the words spoken. The golden rays of the setting sun were shining through the little gothic windows of the church, tinting the smooth white wall on the other side, while the leaves on the The Earl of Clarendon-My lords, in reply to most desirable that my noble friend should take A.N.
