TA, GA.-If a Lottery can, under any circum- The words that trembled on your lips Were uttered not --- I know it well: Were checked and smothered ere they fell; Were little more than others won: And yet you are not wholly true, Nor wholly just what you have done.

> You know---at least you might have known---That every little grace you have---Your hand's faint shake or parting wave; Your every sympathetic look At words that chanced your soul to touch Were much to me; alas how much!

You might have seen---perhaps you saw---How all of these were steps of hope, On which I rose in joy and awe, Up to my passion's lofty scope : I planted on the slippery ground, And higher raised my venturous head, Aud ever new assurance found .--- Milnes.
