The Inauguration Dinner of the Protestant Leish Benevolent Society, AT THE BRITISH AMERICAN BOTHL, MARCH 17TH, 1838.

The Officers and Members of the Protestant Irish Bevevolent Society, with their Guests, in number about sixty, dined all cases. together on St. Patrick's Day, to inaugurate their Society. The Dinner was prepared in Messrs. Kent and Gilbert's usual ex. ante. quisite style, and the Wines furnished, consisting of Champagne, Claret, Hock, Port, Medeira and Sherry were most delicious. The Company sat down at half past seven o'clock, Sheriff Corbett, the President of the Society, in the Chair; Wm. Ferguson, Esq., Vice President, and James Agnew, Esq., Recording Secretary, at either end of the long table. The Guests were very numerous, and the company altogether exhibited a fair sample of the the Chairman, aided by the two Croupiers, gave out the following list of the toasts, prefacing each one with some appropriate

Responded to by Judge Mackense. When the regular Foasts had all been drunk, the Health of the President was given, and responded to most enthusiastically, more especially as it was well known ! that he had risen from a sick bed to do honor to this especial occasion. He expressed himself highly grateful with the token of the Company's well wishes, and apoke warmly of the new Society, and of the great good it would do in relieving worthy objects of charity, during the coming summer. He was most loud'y The Vice-Chairmen were also toasted with marked honor, and they severally responded appropriately. A great many Volunteer Toasts were afterwards drunk, and these elicited several were sung, and the festivities of the night State to the amount of $5,000.
