The best and the only way you can now assert this greatest human privileges is, to turn scorpfully away and your humiliation in the British Parliament, Let those who are willing to remain slaves send belots to serve in the house of your pampered rulers ; do you face, in silent defiance, the stern realities of your position You know the wenkness of your enemy; but you neither know nor appreciate your own strength. Remember that you have in your expatriated brothers in America, true and faithful allies, equal to yourselves in numbers, energy, and patriotism. It requires but the magic power of organization to unite all these scattered elements, to quicken them into activity, and thus arm them with irresistable force. Organise, then, with the sitent earnest determination of men resolved to achieve their independence, In organization rests road by which you can march to the goal of liberty. Organization will form your people giant's strength, will break down every remaining bulwark of British rule in Ireland. and give the land in which God has placed you to your children and your children's children-for ever.
