A DOUBLE SURPRISE. Among the devices which necessity, "the mother of invention," recemmend to the tavorable consideration of the man triots of 1812, our readers have doubtless frequently heard mention of a species of open vessels, familiarly knewn at that time by the name of "Long Boats." Messre. Cunningham, Chown, Conley, These boats were strongly built, quite high out of water, and provided with a number of "sweeps," or oars, by means of which they were rapidly prepelled through the water, when twenty or thirty stalwart men laid hold of the handles. The crews were also furnished with a good supply of rifles, (of the old pattern) cutlasses and election of a Chairman, it was moved by boarding implements. Their duty seemed Mr. Wen.
