HOUSE CLEANING.

No peace, no rest,

For child, or guest ;

At noon or night,

But a bitter blight,

Like a sombre pall,

Has fallen upon all,

And the dark domestic sky

In the parler, in the hall,

At this potent bugle-call,

the floor.

And tables tip as ne'er before,

And with your finger on the latch,

You mutter an imprecation

On the horrid situation,

And stalk into the street,

Scowling on all you meet,

But praying for the freedom of the bird

Within whose quiet nest this dire cor
