FRIDAY EVEN'G, JULY 4, 1873. VISIONS OF THE NIGHT.

O the visions, that the night brings ! O the fluttering of white wings, YOUNG MEN OF BRITAIN for June O benignant eyes and beautiful that down upon us bend! O the hum of happy voices, > absent friend to friend ! O the dainty feet that find me. O the dampled hands that bind me. Of the little love that softly from the starland comes to me!

O the glad throng that rejoices.

Filling soul and heart with feeling, When upon my yearning bosom she is sleeping peacefully ! Ah, how sweet to know this dreaming Is a glimpse, a twilight gleaming.

Of the beauty and the glery of the heaven we adore: And the faces which behold us, And the arms that fondly fold us, Are the faces and embraces of the loved ones gone before.

O the comfort that the night brings O the fluttering of white wings, O benignant eyes and beautiful that down upon us bend ! O the hum of happy voices, O the glad throng that rejoices, When the visions of the midnight bring the absent friend to friend !
