A Catholic in Spite of Himself.

The Unita Cattolica of Rome published an article on the 21st ult., which may be le ter of the Emperor of Germany. It is sud that the Emperor William, when he Monday evening, in St. Andrew's Hall; was haptized, became by that act a perative though he may commit an act of Undervests and Drawers, heretic, though he may commit an act of rem llion, remains always the Pope's subdeavours to withdraw himself from his relation as a subject to the Pope, but he cannot annihilate the rights which the

What is Talent?

Is talent mere mental power and activity independent of permanent results ! Or is it that activity, that persistence, that industry which will push enterprise to a successful issue? It was once said of a man that he was not a talented man. that he was not brilliant, but that he was successful in the enterprises he projected; that without astonishing his associates with the vigour or originality of his opening of the rooms, and of evenings for powers, he invariably commanded their confidence and respect. Was this a man of talent, or was he not? He had a talent for work, but no brilliancy of intellect. getically, and the institution is likely to be But what does the expression, talent for work, mean I Does it not mean the having the power to mind one's own business as business I To be able to concentrate Scotch one's faculties, be they less or more, upon that which one has to do, is perhaps a more precious gift, and a rerer one, than NOW many suppose. It may want in the element of brilliancy, but in its stead, has what deserves a higher commendation, that of usefulness. By "talent" Corner Princess and Sydenhan most people mean a certain activity of RE-Lie-Able. -The Napanee Standard mind and especially a certain readiness reports a fiasco in Mr. Cartwright's meet- of tongue or pen, which seem to them most admirable. But few things are less really admirable than these are capable of becoming ; and few things accountal activity quite as often expends itself upou mere trifling as upon anything else, while of all the things, even the brillian things, said and written by men, what a disc mragingly small proportion actually PARLOUR STOVES-(for Coal) comes to auytning at all ! For example, what a multitude of books have been PARLOUR STOVES-(for Wood.) their authors or publishers, nor benefited II ALL STOVES of the most approved in the smallest degree any human being . What a vast number of great speeches have been made—to the delight of their WAL COOK STOVES by the best authors, and the lovers of everything superlatively brilliant-which just spread themselves out like great seas of fog, and slowly dispersed into universal and deserved forgetfulness! How many dazzling reputations for "talent" live their short day, and then sink into obscurity forever! Now, in view of all this might we not be excused for saying that there is
