REMINERS.

Friday. Sale of Mr. Stark's, Pittsburg, at noon, of Superior Stock.

The well-known initials of the Sun skit man will be found subscribed to a letter printed in another column, in which will be found a full and particular account of the mammoth excursion which has been got up under the auspices of the Listowel or Millertonites for Saturday next, when they propose to shake off the dust of this vale of tears from the shoes and wings of parties wishing to join this first really enjoyable trip of the season will go to consult the Sun-man's small bill of particulars, as he assures us it will be conducted on principles of taste and will be "very solemn and dry."

We have dealt elsewhere with the News' early remarks upon Mr. Conley's appointment, and do not intend to follow its heavy criticism of the Commissioners selected, further than to prick the bubble it blows out of its dish of soap-suds, which, for convenience sake, it now puffs out of a no-party pipe. It is shocked to think that all three Commissioners are Grits. For our own part we would like to have seen a Tory in the Board, though if the Tories composed the whole of it, that would not satisfy that Party's voracious maw. It forgets, however, that the old Board was composed for years exclusively of Tories, (leaving the Ontario Judge out, who is elevated above the political sphere) and yet it did not find occasion to lament its exclusively Tory character. But, then, you see, Tories possess the divine right which can do no wrong—but the Grits—Oh, curse the Grits! How virtuous our contemporary is in Opposition! It takes away one's breath to think of it, and hardly leaves us strength enough to tell how a certain Tory Commissioner put the screws on the tavern-keepers in a certain Commons election not long ago.

BOUND TO BE SURLY.

Our local contemporary, the Kingston Daily News, must have its jaw set. Nothing will please its bilious growth. A few weeks ago it was going to eat the Reform Party without salt because it fancied that Mr. Conley would not be appointed License Inspector. And now its liver is again out of order, and it squirts its little stream of bile because he has been appointed, but was not the unanimous choice of the Reform Association, which refused, it weeps, to nominate him (by a majority of one) "because 'he possessed Conservative proclivities.'"

THE PROTECTION HOWL.

The Hon. Mr. Starbuck, of N.Y. State Legislature, in a recent speech said: "This business of the protectionist is equalized upon his property. His interest in meddling fingers is everywhere, and the burden he imposes generally falls heaviest upon those who are least able to bear it. What is that to him? His rapacity must be gratified. The Federal Government has said he will take his 'pound of flesh,' and he remonstrates. He sees the poor victim of the needle, 'With fingers weary and worn, With eyelids heavy and red, and he hears her agonizing, hungry wail: 'Oh, me, with sisters dear! Oh, me, with mothers and wives! It is not linen you're seeking out, but human creature's lives.' Sticks, sticks, sticks, In poverty, hunger, and dirt, Sewing it over with a double thread A shroud as well as a shirt."

This wailing cry of hunger makes no impression upon him. His rapacity demands, and our thieving tariff laws empower him to exact, that for every needle the poor girl buys for her machine she shall pay to him 47 per cent. more than its value, and for every spool of thread she uses she must pay him 81 per cent. more than its worth. Such legislation, I agree, tends to the accumulation of great estates, but it is always at the expense of an impoverished people. "It favors the land to hastening ill a prey Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

THE APPROACHING DOOM.

THE APPROACHING DISSOLUTION OF THE UNIVERSE AS DESCRIBED IN A "FUTURE AND SUPPLEMENTARY CIRCULAR" BY ONE WHO KNOWS ALL ABOUT IT.

To the Editor of the British Whig.

"As you are aware, sir, we are on the eve of an event of momentous importance. In a few brief hours this old world of ours will roll itself up as a scroll, and its inhabitants will soar aloft into the abodes of bliss. What may not inappropriaely be termed the advance squad, headquarters Listowel, commander-in-chief D. D. Hay, M.P.P., and chaplain Mr. Miracle Brown, will bid a fond adieu to this terrestrial orb, sever old associations at this early hour, and wait them selves into the blue empyrean. Then will follow, in due course, the regular army, until old Mother Earth will become as desolate and forsaken as a free grant township in the wilds of Muskoos, and thereafter will speedily melt, thaw, resolve itself into a dew, and disappear as itself before the morning sun. I trust, sir, you approach this great subject with due solemnity. And above all things we should prepare our minds for the great event. The Millertonites have set apart the first of April as the day upon which the serial excursion will take place; it behooves us therefore to set our house in order. This collapse of the universe on the first of April is going to be a solemn thing—very solemn—and very dry. I see by some of the newspapers that Mr. D. D. Hay denies that he ever contemned any such notion, and that he says he has rebuked on all fitting occasions the reckless presumption of the misguided people who have promulgated the view in question. This, sir, I would fondly believe, is a weak invention of the arch-enemy of man to throw cold water on a great and glorious enterprise. For some months past it has been generally understood that Mr. Hay was in sympathy with the movement and was preparing to ascend. Now, at the eleventh hour, he disclaims in public print any intention of going up. Far be it from me to impute that this misguided man has been constrained by pressure brought to bear by his fellow salary-grabbers to postpone the excursion until they shall have freed their consciences of the great load of guilt which is dragging them down to the sordid things of this wicked world; but I think, sir, you will bear me out in saying that as Mr. Hay made no sign of disapproval until the very eve of the performance he is in duty bound, by all considerations of honor and consistency to proceed to climb. Having been duly bribed and advertised by the Canadian press, it does not lie in his power to refuse to keep his engagement and to thus break faith with the great body of the Canadian public. As an infidelistomist out of that body, I call upon you to keep that star performer—shooting star performer, I may say—to his engagement. Mr. Hay must not be rebuked. The performance will go on whether he is ready or not. It will be very solemn and dry. Gifts with a flow of language that finds but little space in the Ontario Legislature, which place, by the way, in the language of a practical politician of many years' standing, "is a mere County Council." Mr. Hay is undoubtedly one of the foremost men of the age, and I look hopefully forward to the time when he will make his mark on the pages of the records of this country. It may be retorted by some base soul that he has already made his mark in the records of his country in the shape of a receipt for his share of the salary grab, but I scorn all such attempts to drag down a child of genius to the leveling level of the hired man. He has now an opportunity of proving himself fitted for a "higher sphere," and to mount on the wings of the morning and soar aloft into the realms where in rapturous rhetoric of his he has winged his way before. It will be very solemn and dry. It might be as well to remark en passant that any of your readers who contemplate laying in cordwood had better defer doing so for the present. They will do well to practice economy by scratching along with chips and things until after the first of April. All my friends are diligently promising to settle their little bills on the day set apart by Charles Fox for the same purpose—this day after the Day of Judgment. This shows great foresight. It is also a striking instance of presence of mind combined with a lively expectation of absence of body. It will be very solemn and dry. The business management of this serial excursion is in the hands of a responsible committee, who, I am assured by private advices, will leave no stone unturned to make it a success. Stone seats will be reserved for members of the Press and other elderly females, and a brass band has been retained to give zest to the occasion. Several of our most talented public men have kindly consented to deliver brief addresses to wit away the time, and I am assured there will be nothing of a nature that could offend the most fastidious. There will be no return tickets, but a liberal allowance will be made to those who get up clubs or take a family ticket. It will be very solemn and dry. From a glance at the programme I am in a position to state that the entertainment en route will be of the most recherché character. I trust I betray no confidence, sir, when I say that an oration by Dr. Tupper, readings of original pieces by the Almansa man from North Grey, a duet by Messrs. Currie and Rykert, disquisitions on political purity by the Hon. Malcolmo Cameron, and other performances of a like ennobling and elevating character will form a prominent feature of the entertainment. Baggage will be checked close through, but no allowance will be made for breakage. Passengers are respectfully requested not to stand on the platform while the machine is in motion, and to maintain the best of humor, particularly while passing through the milky way, so as not to spur anything. It will be very solemn and dry. People who have relatives along the route would do well to apprise them by postal card of their contemplated passage through. Those especially who have friends in any of the other planets should arrange for a special supply of refreshments, so that no danger of discomfort may be feared. Nothing tends to mar the harmony of an excursion so much as the presence of a hungry man. Great

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Tuesday, March 28.—A report was presented to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, recommending that no further proceedings be taken in the case of Mr. Daoust, member for Two Mountains.

Mr. Blake's bill respecting the Supreme Court was read a third time and passed. The remainder of the afternoon session was spent in considering the Committee's report on the bill, Messrs. Patterson Fleming and Barron (Algoma), making several suggestions with respect to particular amendments. Mr. DeLoose immediately after recess proposed a motion which he had given notice with respect to the delay in pushing forward the Pacific railway. He spoke temperately, but he plainly warned the Government that their temporizing policy and parish politics, would surely lead to undesirable results. With the exception of Mr. Dymond, the Grit members who spoke were emphatic in denouncing the motion. Mr. Plumb made a brief speech, rebutting many of the extravagant statements which had been made by some of the speakers. Mr. Banster defended his Province and denounced the Government, and said that though he would have introduced at this stage, there was this excuse for its introduction, that though the House had been in session for seven weeks no policy had been announced by the Ministry, and it was impossible to get an information from them.

At ten minutes past one Sir John Macdonald rose, as he said, not to speak at length upon the question, but to state briefly why he could not vote for the amendment. In the first place, he could not vote upon it because it was entirely illogical, and in the second place because it referred only to the construction of the railway in British Columbia, ignoring the benefit of the Dominion, and the general benefit for which the agreement to build the road was first entered into. He did not deny the patriotism of the mover of the amendment, but he thought it was most unwise in proposing it before the Government had made their promised announcement on the subject. The members were then called in and a vote taken, with the following result:—Yeas, 6; nays, 154; and the House adjourned at ten minutes to two.

The Hon. Mr. Starbuck, of N.Y. State Legislature, in a recent speech said: "This business of the protectionist is equalized upon his property. His interest in meddling fingers is everywhere, and the burden he imposes generally falls heaviest upon those who are least able to bear it. What is that to him? His rapacity must be gratified. The Federal Government has said he will take his 'pound of flesh,' and he remonstrates. He sees the poor victim of the needle, 'With fingers weary and worn, With eyelids heavy and red, and he hears her agonizing, hungry wail: 'Oh, me, with sisters dear! Oh, me, with mothers and wives! It is not linen you're seeking out, but human creature's lives.' Sticks, sticks, sticks, In poverty, hunger, and dirt, Sewing it over with a double thread A shroud as well as a shirt."

This wailing cry of hunger makes no impression upon him. His rapacity demands, and our thieving tariff laws empower him to exact, that for every needle the poor girl buys for her machine she shall pay to him 47 per cent. more than its value, and for every spool of thread she uses she must pay him 81 per cent. more than its worth. Such legislation, I agree, tends to the accumulation of great estates, but it is always at the expense of an impoverished people. "It favors the land to hastening ill a prey Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

THE OPPOSITION AND PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.—At the meeting of the Public Accounts Committee this morning, only two members of the Opposition presented themselves. One shortly withdrew, and the other announced he had nothing to say or do, whereupon the Committee adjourned. There were three Cabinet Ministers and two Deputy Ministers in attendance, with numerous documents and returns, ready to answer any inquiries; but it has been evident, the last two or three meetings of the Committee, that the predictions of the Opposition press, made previous to the meeting of the House—will end, like those which heralded the opening of the Ontario Legislature, in the conclusion that there are no irregularities to discover, or that the investigators will not be able to require to discover them.—Globe.
