TUESDAT EV'NG, APRIL 11, 1876 The Seasons Come and the Seasons Go.

The seasons come and the seasons go-The summer's sun and the winter's snow, The spring with its wealth of blossoms fair. The autumn with treasures rich and rare, But we leave the flowers on the dewy grass And grasp at the sunbeams as they pass.

The scasons come and the scasons go, And the stream of time doth onward flow, Circling the whole wide world around, While years are with God's goodness crowne And his gifts upon our pathway lie.

The seasons come and the seasons go. Merrily. Sadly, To and fro

As daily we older and older grow.

Then we think of the spring time long gone past And the summer that was too short too last, And the auturn when our hopes sank low, Till our hair turns white like the winter's snow The season's go and the seasons come.

And each one is drawing us nearer our home, Oh? God, do Thou grant that the seeds we have
