Mr Gildersleeve Elected to Stay at Home.

The municipal elections took place yesterday in all the Wards in the city, and the contest, especially for the Mayoralty proved to be one of the hardest ever fought in Kingston. Of course, under the ballot, everything was conducted quietly and with out any confusion, and the number of votes polled was exceedingly large. The fact that bringing out a larger number of voters, but it | ber of callers was large. certainly shows that all interested did their "level best" to bring out the voters. The nization on the part of Mr Melntyre's friends, it was confidently expected by many from the various subdivisions. that he would be defeated. Indeed that gentleman himself finding out the mistake that had been made on his side and the many influences, not a few grossly unfair and ignoble ones besides political, at work to secure his defeat, began to fear regarding the result. He was at home taking tea when the intelligence of his victory was conveyed to him. So confident were the Gildersleeve party of success from an early hour of the day, that many of them shouted after gentlemen supporting Mr McIntyre, telling them they would "catch it to night," and were offering any amount of odds against him. The result, therefore, was a genuine surprise to them. It is reported that a large amount of money changed hands on the election. The most remarkable fact is that Mr William Robinson's influence in Rideau Ward has been set at naught, as is witnessed by the large majority received by Mr Mc-Intyre there. Victoria Ward did nobly, and there the Gildersleeve party worked tooth and nail to run in their man, but withdid not do what Mr Gildersleeve expected of it, only giving him about half the majority he hoped for. In Cataragni Ward he (Mr G.) was more successful than was anticipated by Mr McIntyre's supporters; but it is said that between "standard elevating" in various forms and the misrepresentations made | McDermott use of by a prominent Grit, who was playing | Wilson . the religious prejudice game, while Mr Robinson was working on the Orange tack in Rideau Ward, he lost a good number of Dunus. votes. The same game was tried in Frontenac Price Ward, but, thanks to Mr John O'Brien, Mr Brannigan and other staunch friends, without effect, and this Ward remained

The Aldermanic contests were conducted with great vigour. In Cataragui Mr J. D. Thompson headed the poll, and was followed by Messrs Allen and Anglin. In Frontepac the old members are returned after a hard struggle. In Rideau Ald. Carson headed the poll, Dr. Fee and Ald. Asslestine following close after. In Sydenham Ald McRoslecture to be delivered by Principal Grant, | sie polled the largest votes, Messrs Woods on the 17th instant, on "The Life and Times and Gildersleeve following after him. In of Joseph Howe." The learned Principal Ontario Ward Ald McDermott has been left, at home, which is mainly to be attributed to and there is no doubt that it will be very his support of Mr Gildersleeve. The two old members and Mr Wilson were elected. In St. Lawrence the three old members were mers' and St. Andrew's Churches. We returned, Ald. Drennan being reelected much to his own surprise. Victoria returned Alds, Gaskin, Walkem and Mooess, the old members, Mr Vandewater carrying a very good vote AN EXCITING SCENE.

When five o'clock arrived crowds commenced to assemble in the vicinity of the newspaper offices and some at the office of Mr Gildersloeve. In half an hour the News flice and job press room were densely crowded. Many who endeavoured to obtain and. place him at the head of the column and were packed like herrings in a barrel. A ascended the platform and was greeted with nouncing Mr Gildeersleeve's, victory or over thew physically strong persons submitted to the office so as to get the earliest information large crowd, equally anxious, was assembled. Some in the office and in the crowd expresse the opinion that Mr McIntyre had lost the battle, but a few cheerful spirits would not give way to despondency. great was the crowd that it was with great difficulty that the scrutineers with the returns could get near the office. As each return arrived, the greatest anxiety was manifested; but all the time McIntyre stock was going up. Vain attempts were made to ! suppress cheering until after the final return o'clock when it arrived, and when the announcement of Mr McIntyre's victory was was carried with deep feeling. A letter re- made the enthusiasm was unbounded and

He did not so much care for the money spent against him, as he knew that his friends could not be bought, but he feared the villaneus falsehoods that were circulated against him so persistently and which were so insidiously circulated that he had no ample means of refuting them. He thanked his friends who wrought for him so industriously against such odds. He would say nothing against Mr Gildersleeve personally but against many of his supporters he inveighed strongly. He was enthusiastically cheered after his brief address,

THE DECLARATION.

Vandewater 72

The declaration of the result of the election took place at noon to-day at the City Hall, which was pretty well filled. The City Clerk read the result of the voting, which is given above. In response to loud calls, Mr McIntyre loud applause. He said he was much ob figed to the electors for the bandsome manner in which he had been returned. money was spent against him, and he knew there was some-but his opponents manu-factured some despicable falsehoods and circulated them against him. He knew that was sorry to say some of his friends believed them. It was easy for a crafty, insidious means of refuting it. Then the crafty canvasser could go to another house and tell a Mr McIntyre, who had been informed of lie of a different description. The voter ing inquiries, and therefore took the statements as truths. This was done, and by the basest of means the large majority he expected was reduced. He confessed that he was disheartened during the whole day, when on going round the seventeen polling NOW places he had found ten persons .who had promised to vote for him acting as scrutineers other side, body, breeches, bones and all. (Laughter.. Their chagrin was manifest toda, and they ought to keep the parties who bought them to their promises. . (Applause. If they did not look after their new found friends these promises would not be fulfilled. At the nomination he had stated that no solitics would be introduced into the con test. Nor, now that he was elected, did he intend to make a political victory of the election. He was coing to perform the duty of Mayor without respect to persons. If a single department of the hayor for 1878, for want of experience or otherwise, he would resign. But he was determined that nothing should suffer so lar as industry and attention could help him The sleigh in which Mr McIntyre and (applause.) He was exceedingly grateful several of his supporters was then proceeded for the victory which he had achieved against base and dishonourable means. Notwithstanding this, he meant as Mayor, to treat friends and foes alike, that is so far as public business was concerned, although he would know how to treat in private those who had sold him (applaus) A gentleman had promised to support Mr Gibblersleeve because-that gentleman was a musician, and had sung at concerts, &c Now he (Mr. McIntyre) was not a musician, but certainly Mr Gildersleeve had shown himself to be one by playing second fid lie yesterday (Laughter and applause) He again thank-

Men generally liked in see how cocks looked after a battle, and e assured them that this cock was there still. (Laughter F He had heard many speeches made from that platform on sunt lar occasions. He was much obliged to Mr McIntyre for all the pleasant things he had said, and he was sure that gentleman would give him the credit of saying that he believed Mr McIntyre would till the chair creditably if he was elected. He was sorry, however, that Mr Melatyre should have so far forgotten himself as to raise an accusation against those who had oppused him. In the moment of victory, he ought to be able to, forgive. Mr Gildersleeve then related the story of his, being brought out. He thought he could be elected at first, but after canvassing for three or four days he felt it would be a dithcult task to He mentioned this to his friends; but while some were willing that he should retire, others would not allow him, and so he concluded that as he was in the field he could not go back. The result of the election was far above his expectation, taking into consideration the extensive and persistent canvass made by Mr McIntyre. He confessed that from the result of the last three or four days' canvass he felt a little disappointed when he saw the figures last night. Some people counted without their host, and that was what he and his friends had done. Mr Gildersloeve then, in an indignant manner, threw back on Mr McIntyre the base imputation that he and his friends had acted improperly. He would not allow them to be thus slandered.

Mr Gildersleeve was then called for, and

Mr McIntyre-I can prove them. (Ap-

A voice-What about the wood and coal? (Laughter and applause.) Mr Gildersleeve continued that the accusations were untrue, and he would not allow them to be thrown out without repelling them. He considered yesterday's vote was, under the circumstances, a victory for him, No. 5. No. 6. Total and the majority was very small.

Ald Walkem then ascended the platform and thanked his constituents for electing him. He advised Mr McIntyre to use his best endeavour to follow in the footsteps of Mayor McKelvey. Ald. Walkem paid a very high tribute to Mr McFelvey's ability, and then proceeded to point out that Mr Molntyre was a good example for young men, he having risen step by step to his present position. Ald Walkem advocated economy in the City Finances, and also the sending of the best men to the Council. He spoke at some length on the necessity of the members of the Conneil doing their best to keep down the taxes. Ald Woods was loudly called for and was greeted with great applause. He said he was much obliged to his friends for electing him to the position of junior Alderman of Sydenham Ward. His object in going into of never going in debt carried out. He also OPENING condemned the system of Ward appropriations as being a victous one, and advocated the appointment of one man to look after the expenditure or the city.

Aid. Dupuis also spoke, advocating Ward meetings, and insisting that municipal electious were far more important matters than Dominion oa Provincial politics. Mr T. H. McGuire then addressed the audience after which the meeting adjourn-
