A Turkish Army at Prayers.

Each man takes his place in the ranks, his hands hanging close by his sides. Then he lifts them to his ears as if to shut out SKATES, on his knees, and bowing his body forward neems lost in contemplation. After a few seconds he sinks to his knees, and leans back upon his heels, and then bowing with his forehead to the earth, exclaims or rather chants,-"Allah Akbar" (God great). Three times he thus bows and RECEIVED BY EXPRESS THIS MORN sharts, and then he stands up bowing chants, and then he stands up, bowing chanting three times, "La Allah il Allah" (there is no God but God). The remainder of the somewhat tedious prayer which follows consists principally as far as I can make out, of long verses of the "Koran. In all his religious exercises the Turkish CORBETT & CO'S soldier is devoutness and attention itself. and it is perhaps most in privacy that this is most apparent. I have frequently come unexpectedly upon some rugged soldier in one of the wild lonely ravines that gash the hillsides around, standing before the ragged overcoat, which served him for a praying carpet and going through his rather active religious motions with a zeal which would do credit to the most selfconscious Pharisce. The stranger who for the first time witnesses the united prayer of the Turkish soldiers in camp is considerably puzzled by ithe selection of heterogeneous articles brought forward to the place of worship when the Muezzin's praying carpet of one description or another, and that he take off his shoes as well. One man brings a ragged sheerskin, another a goat hide, a third the saddlecloth of his horse, a fourth mayhap his cleaned or dyed and made stiff like new jacket; every one has something or another on which he may kneel. To see some hundred men thus hurrying to the spot where the blue-rebed, white-turbaned | Imann stands, one might be easily led to STEAM DYEING, BLEACHING AND Office, or to imagine them so many persons eager to dispose of superfluous garments. - London

Another Deficit of About $1,500,-

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr Cartwright Finance Minister brought down the budget, and during the course of his speech he had to confess that there was another deficit this year of about fifteen hundred thousand dollars; and within a few years the extent of our trade and commerce had been reduced from $218,- young men. 000,000 to about $168,000,000; and this too with an increase to our population during that time of 400,000 souls.
