"How Women Love Dress."

He sat by a window at twilight, And placedly puffed his eigar. He gazed on a neighbouring aky-light, And thought of his bank stock at par.

Iwo voices came upward, as high as The place where he sat, from the street Two ladies, on "gored" and on "bias," Were holding communion sweet.

And fashion's absurd excess; "How women do rave over dress! Just get any two of them started,

Then he mused upon feminine folly

He spoke like a hero, strong-hearted, Who all such frivolity loathes. "And the way they oppress the poor crea-Who build all those dresses and things !

And they'll talk for a month about clothes."

They'd like to make marks on their features For a little mistake in the strings." Here a knock at the door. Then a waiter they're not later.

Quick, light up the whole chandelier !" One glance from a proper position Suffices their fate to decide; The linings are only Silesian, The trowsers a trifle too wide.

"Well, if I don't pitch into that Schindler I never did see such a bilk. Why I told the outrageous old swindler I wanted the linings half silk !

"Oh, hang all the scoundrely tailors! The collar's a half-inch too high. The trowsers-they might be a sailor's! Now wouldn't I look like a guy?" Each glance makes him more and more irate.

"Why, they look even worse from behind I'll blow up the sneaking old pirate; I'll give him a piece of my mind. "I'm done with the scoundrel, that's certain.

Now, if ever I saw such a sight May I be eternally - " (Curtain ! The rest wouldn't suit ears polite.) -Scribner's "Brie-a-Brac.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

Ottawa, February 25.

DR. STEWART, OF KINGSTON. On Mr Haggart moving the second reading of Dr. Stewart's bill, Mr Mackenzie asked to have it stand, as there were several objections to it. One strong objection was that it was really a public, not a private bill.

QUESTIONS BY MEMBERS. Several questions were put and answered.

THE WEST INDIA TRADE. Mr Langevin moved an address for corres- fairly accepted. pondence since 1st February, 1875, relating to communication with the British West Indies, &c. Communication with the West Indies, was, he complained, of a defective two sides of the House in a matter on which character, but they probably could not expect great improvements until they took steps to increase the trade between the West Indies and the Dominion.

ERRORS IN "HANSARD." Mr Plumb called attention to the very dress had been printed in the official reports. At least a hundred grave errors occurred in it, and under these circumstances he declined to be responsible for it.

CANADA PACIFIC RAILWAY. Mr DeCosmos moved for a return of every report of the Chief Engineer, acting engineer, and any other engineer, or engineers, of the Canada Pacific Railway, suggesting or recommending a survey in 1876 of the whole or part of the route between Burrard's Inlet and Yellow Head Pass.

Mr Dewdney suggested the words "other papers' should be added after the words "Canada Pacific Railway." Mr DeCosmos said these papers might not be official, and he must, therefore, decline to allow the change. Mr Mackenzie said the amendment was not necessary, for he would bring down all seconded it. And they now talked about insulting his Excellency. He had warned the Premier two years ago that these extra-vagant expenditures must stop, but they had not stopped, and it was incumbent on him to make the motion he had placed in the Speaker's bands. Dr Tupper regretted exceedingly this motion had been made, but no one could question the right of an hon, gentleman to make it, in fact he had endesvoured privately to include his hon, friend to withdraw Having said so much, however, he must say he had to regret very deeply that the Premier had taken the ground which he had. The information having been asked for, it should have been given without a question. For his Excellency he had the highest consideration and respect, and he believed the expenditures made would make an ample return to the country which the Governor. General had so ably served. He could not defend his course, however, here or elsewhere if he were to vote against the motion, much as he regretted that it had been made. Mr Holton said the Premier had stated that all the information asked for was f be found in the Public Accounts, and it was certainly an insult to his Excellency, who was soon to leave the country, to ask for the details of expenditure connected with the NEW TEAS, NEW TEAS, NEW TEAS, age books of the period. official life of himself and his family.
