Thy coming late,

In the dusk would lay my heart Close to thine own, and say how dear thou art O life! O rarest hour! When the dark world onward rolls, And the fiery planets drift; Then from our commingled souls

Clouds of passion and of power,

Flames of incouse lift ! Come, for the world is turning To meet the morning star ! Answer my spirit's yearning And seek the arms that call thee from afar Let them close - ah, let them close Around thee now, and lure thee to repose.

Washington Letter.

(From our own Correspondent.) Washington, D.C., March 16, 1878. In the past week there have been half adozen specches in Congress of great abilit and interest. In the House two New York members, Hewitt and Cox, attacked the civil service policy of the Administration with much vigor, and the latter with charac. of the advanced woman, is a contract giving teristic wit. It is understood that Representative Foster, who comes from the district in which the President has his home, will in a few days reply, defending the Administration. In the Senate Mr Blaine made a speech. in which he denounced Secretary Schurz for his course towards parties who had been and are being prosecuted for using the timber on Government lands in the south husbands should be pursued into cellars, and in the territories. The Secretary seems to have acted on the supposition that the prosecuted parties were "rings" formed for the purpose of plundering the Government, while Senator Blaine assumed that they were honest pioneers who were doing just what had been done without objection since the foundation of the Government. Senator Matthews made the other ambi tious speech of the week. He spoke nearly three hours on the means of protecting the Government from loss on the bonds issued to assist the building of the Pacific railroads. The tenor of his very able argument was to the effect that the roads should not be crippled at this time in order to make an early adjustment of their affairs with the Government. In actual legislation not much has been | bad taste as to the time and manner of her accomplished. The most notable of all occurrences, politically, was a caucus of the Democratic majority on the Army Bill. This Bill reduces the number of officers in in the army, and makes very radical changes of various kinds, and these facts, together with the other fact that the Democaucus necessary. The result of the caucus was a Committee of thirteen to take the subject into consideration. The final disposal of the Silver Bill released the Congressional mind to deal with other problems of national import; and the award of the Fisheries Commission was one

And why? we should like to know. If marriage, according to the doctrine not only equal rights but the same rights to the woman and the man, why should not the husband be protected against the wife ! Because Le needs no protection? Alas, how many deceived and betrayed husbands, who bear their wrongs -their personal wrongs and the wrongs of their sex-buried in their manly besoms, could protest against this assumption! It is not necessary that threatened with carving knives, or, as in a late Western case, half hanged in their sleep, their fellow-citizens. Is a woman to seize her husband's pocket-book and possess herself of its contents, and when he attempts to recover it shall she place herself upon the floor in the position before described and yell murder, and is there to be no remedy?none until she begins proceedings for a divorce? One of the witnesses, an assistant in the defendant's store, testified to having seen her, in a fit of rage, "butt" a man who was also employed in the store. It is not surprising that so eccentric's human female appears to have been in the habit of abusing her husband before customers in the store. Wives, we believe, usually reserve that pleasure for the privacy of the connubial apartment; but what may not expected of a lady who butts! Dealing with the subject in a spirit of candor, we do not hesitate to almit our belief that, by the majority of the sex, both the public abuse and the butting will be condemned as in bad form.
