J. Stephenson presided, and in the course of his opening address made a complimentary reference to Professor Fenwick. The latter gentleman delivered an address, giving a detailed statement of the work done during the session, and testifying to the seal with which the students attended to their duties. Several other addresses were delivered during the evening, Dr. Wilkes, the Principal, stating that in reference to the general work of the College, he would say there were sixteen in attendance until Christmas, and seventeen since; two were graduates; nine undergraduates, and six were for the theological course only. The Rev. Mr Bray delivered an address on "The University and its work in the present age."
