Easter Morning.

Awake from thy alumbers deep ! Arise ! and with hands that are glowing Put off the white garments of sleep ! Make thyurlf fair, O goddens ! In new and resplondent array, For the footsteps of Him who has risen

Flushes the trailing arbutus Low under the forest leavessign that the drowsy goddens The breath of her Lord perceives. While He suffered, her pulse beat numbly While He slept, who was still with pain

Now far, now near, is heard The first prelusive warble Of rivulet and of hird. O listen ! the Jubilate

From every bough is poured, And earth in the smile of spring-time Arises to greet her Lord !

Attention is requested to my facilities for From a loftier height than Olympus Light flows, from the Temple above, In the dawn of the Kingdom of Love. For day in full splendor make room

> She comes! the bright goddess of morning. In crimson and purple array; Far down on the hill-tops she tosses The first golden lillies of day. On the mountains her sandals are glowing, O'r the valleys she speeds on the wing, Till earth is all rosy and radiant

Open the gates of the Temple ; Spread branches of palm and of bay , let not the spirits of nature Alone deck the Conquerous way. While Spring from her death sleep arises And joyous his presence awaits, While Morning's smile lights up the heavens, Open the Beautiful Gates !

He is here! The long watches are over, The stone from the grave rolled away. 'We shall sleep," was the sigh of the mid
