THROWING STONES FROM GLASS HOUSES. Mention was made of the fact vesterday that in a short editorial paragraph the word plications" appeared in print instead of "ap licants," the latter having been written, as 'berth" was printed for "birth," Our infallibl local contemporary, in the same issue that explains away blunders in its own column makes considerable ado over the circumstance. To enforce the adage that persons who live in glass houses should not throw stones and on the principle of "tit for tat" we advise the learned organ to try its hand at joking at the expense of its own blunders, few of which, out of a host, we point out: "We repeat from our contemporary verbatim": "It will undoubtedly repute the slanders." POESY, SWEET POESY. - Those rash young persons who break out into a sort of measics of verse on the approach of spring, and dilate upon "vernal bloom" and "summer's rose, etc., are at work as hard as ever filling the waste baskets of newspapers. The difficulty which even an expert may sometimes find turning out a neat rhyme may be seen fron the following attempt:-

"We parted on an eve in June, That soft and balmy month, Beneath the sweetly beaming moon, And-wunth-dunth-Hunth-who the deuce can Find us a rhyme for month ?"

Our contemporary has done remarkably well already in the office line; and if there be other aspirants for office within its precincts they would do well, like other local Grits, to push their claims without delay, as possibly the "Organized Hypocrisy's" days are numbered. The windom of the Globe's course in this will be apparent when it is considered that its own excursions into the realms of logic have not resulted gloriously. The famous attempt to make out its case from the supposed instance occurring at Grand's sale in this city, and the quagmire of absurity in which it found itself floundering in consequence of that attempt, appears to have convinced the Globe, that, though others might be able to deal logically with the question of protection, it was not able to do so. It has cousequently acted wisely in resorting to the employment of outside talent. We suppose we are justified in assuming that Mr Burchard's argument is the best that can be brought forward on the Free Trade aide of the question of who pays the duty, and f he has failed to make out a case it is because that is unpossible. In the space at our disposal it would be
